Night School Closing Set To Stretch Coal Supply

7000 Students Hit By Decision; Daytime Institutions to Make Own Decisions Later

Coal Talks Fruitless

CONTRACT negotiations in coal impasse again end with "no progress." Page 10.

FSA May Have Answer

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

The District's adult night school program of about 7000 students was ordered suspended indefinitely yesterday to help save soft-coal supplies.

Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning said the program will be halted in all schools—not only in those burning coal—because of the difficulty in administering the program with some schools operating and some closed.

Corning also announced, after a meeting with the Commissioners, that public schools will definitely be open for day sessions Thursday and probably Friday.

Whether schools stay open or close after that would be placed squarely up to school officials under a rationing plan for District institutions now being considered by the Commissioners.

Each to Decide

Though not yet adopted, the plan provides for establishing priorities for all District buildings burning coal. Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, said that after top-priority institutions have been provided for, those in charge of schools and other buildings would be told how much coal is available to them.

Each would then decide whether it could continue fulltime or part-time operation or should close. C. Melvin Sharpe, president of the Board of Education, has been authorized by the board to close the schools if necessary.

John M. Rieks, associate superintendent of schools for buildings and grounds, said the schools have on hand a five or six-day supply of coal. But it is unevenly distributed, he said.

18,000 Tons

The key to whether the District must ration coal to its own agencies may be contained in the answer to a telegram sent by the Commissioners yesterday to Jess Larson, administrator of General Services Administration. This agency contains Federal Supply Service which furnishes coal to District buildings.

The Commissioners told Larson they understood FSS had 18,000 tons of soft coal on hand and asked if the District can "count on our regular one-third proportion . . ." Larson's office has made no decision on this.

However, a GSA spokesman said Larson has already instructed FSS to allocate coal in proportion to normal usage. He also said FSS has 21,000 tons on hand, instead of 18,000. If the District normally Easton, Md., Feb. 21 (AP).—A 27-year-old combat veteran from Washington has admitted that he rifled the purses of choir members at four churches here during services Sunday morning. The loot was about $210.

State's Attorney Harry E. Clark said he would file larceny charges against the man, identified on police records as James Robert Fisher of 1440 Rhode Island ave. nw.

Pontiac, Mich., Feb. 21 (AP).—Police officers, following a tip from a Washington, D. C., school teacher, tonight dug up human bones believed to be the remains of a man slain 27 months ago.

Sheriff Clare L. Hubbell said the victim apparently was Stanley James, 52, of suburban Clawson, who has been missing since November, 1947.

Digging began late today after James' widow corroborated a story first told to Clawson police by the husband of a daughter, Mrs. Muriel

After-Hours Clubs 'Hangouts,' Top Police Officials Testify

By Edward F. Ryan and Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporters

Three top police officials yesterday told the House District crime inquiry that after-hours clubs were hangouts for "tarts" and a "detriment to the community and legitimate business."

"You don't have to be a member to buy liquor at the after-hours clubs," Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, told the committee, "and tarts hang out in a majority of them."

Capt. Beverly C. Beach, of No. 7 precinct, said that although the clubs were primarily gambling joints four years ago, he thought their chief threat today is to legitimate businessmen who have to pay heavy taxes to provide similar services.

Capt. Howard V. Covell, of No. 1 precinct, described the after-hours clubs generally as a detriment to the community.

Captain Covell also testified yesterday that he had received "from a reliable informant" a tip that "big-time crap games" were held last month at the Atlas Club, before-and-after-hours resort at 1349 E st. nw.

Covell said he had visited the clubs then, and on several previous occasions, and found "several tables that possibly were used for gambling games, tables such as you would find in crap and card games. But at no time have I ever found any gambling going on there," he said.

Committee Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.) said last night one of the next subjects to be aired in the hearings will be the problem of sex crimes, and how the recently enacted District sex-psychopath law is operating to curb them.

Davis said he may confer with Committee Counsel Hyman I. Fischbach today to map out the

D. C. to Test Discrimination Law of 1873

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The District Government yesterday took a legal position that discrimination against Negroes in restaurants is illegal. A test case was ordered to let the courts decide the issue.

The question hinges on whether two laws passed by the Legislative Assembly of the District in 1872 and 1873 still are in effect.

The Washington Restaurant Association last night recommended that each eating place continue its past policy until a court test determines the issue.

The law of 1872 prohibited discrimination because of "race or color" against patrons of restaurants, hotels, ice cream saloons, barber shops or bath houses.

The law of 1873 restated anti-discrimination regulations for res-

Doctor Trailing Virus in Schools Attacked by It

A Public Health Service doctor, who has been trying to track down a mysterious virus in 155 sick Arlington school children, has come down with similar symptoms himself.

Dr. R. J. Huebner, head of the USPHS virus section, speaking from his home at 302 Cedar lane, Bethesda, said he had a little fever and a cough, but did not feel very sick. He stayed home, he said, mainly to keep whatever it was he had from spreading.

Arlington teachers were instructed Monday to keep close watch on pupils and to send home any showing symptoms of infection and a temperature above 99.2 degrees.

Huebner said several of his co-workers have complained of similar symptoms, but he was not certain it was the infection. The PHS doctors were called in Friday by school officials.

The officials said yesterday no new cases were reported, but Arlington Hospital said an "unusual number" of children and adults with symptoms similar to the school pupils had been treated, including three nurses.

U. S. Charges Shuberts Bar Theater Here

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

The Shubert brothers and Marcus Heiman were charged yesterday with monopolizing the legitimate theater business in Washington, New York and other large American cities.

The Government yesterday filed a civil suit in New York against Lee Shubert, Jacob J. Shubert, Heiman and three corporations they control, alleging violation of antitrust laws.

Heiman is the owner of the National Theater here which was converted from a legitimate theater to a movie house in 1948.

The Government's complaint notes there is at the present time no theater in Washington and continues:

"For a number of years two theaters in this city were available for the presentation of legitimate attractions, the Belasco and the National, both controlled by the defendants.

Charge Agreement

"By design and agreement of the defendants, the Belasco was kept 'dark' for a number of years so as to eliminate competition.

"In 1948, the defendant Heiman converted the National into a motion-picture house, despite the fact that Washington is acknowledged to be one of the most desirable cities in the United States for the presentation of legitimate attractions.

"Other persons desiring to operate a theater in Washington have been unable to obtain a commitment from the defendants with respect to securing legitimate attractions, hence making it difficult, if not impossible, for a person independent of the defendants to operate a theater in Washington."

The Shuberts owned the Belasco while Heiman owned the National. After the Belasco was darkened and the National became Washington's only legitimate theater, the Shuberts sold the Belasco to the Government in 1940.

There have been several attempts to revive the legitimate theater in Washington since the National was converted to film fare in 1948.

Sought The Belasco

Most promising of these were the efforts of the American National Theater and Academy to lease the Belasco from the Government for legitimate presentations.

About a year ago, radioman Theodore Granik announced he proposed to build a legitimate theater on Wisconsin ave. nw., but wanted the assurance of the United Booking Office, Inc., one of the three defendant corporations in the Government's suit, that he would be able to obtain legitimate attractions.

Granik said later that the United Booking Office informed him it would make no commitments to a theater that was not even built.

The owners of the Gayety Theater, Washington burlesque house, are renovating it for a two-week run of a stage attraction, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," starring Susan Peters, starting March 6. But at this time the Gayety has announced no further

ECA's Task More Acute, Officials Say

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Administration leaders asked Congress for third-year Marshall Plan funds yesterday as an all-important way to check the spread of Soviet power.

ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman said Moscow's "schemes for world domination will be given terrible impetus" by any halt in American aid or in western European recovery.

And Secretary Acheson, detecting "signs of increasing boldness" on the part of the Kremlin, warned that the task of European recovery was "doubly acute, doubly urgent" in the context of what he called "the present world crisis."

Hoffman and Acheson testified at a joint hearing of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

$2,950,000,000 Sought

They were seeking an authorization of $2,950,000,000, of which 600 million would be set aside for a time, largely as an incentive to the European nations to break down trade and exchange barriers among themselves.

The present request is $1,300,000,000 less than the appropriation for this fiscal year. Hoffman later submitted a tentative list showing that Britain would get the biggest share, or about one-fourth of the total, with western Germany, France and Italy following in decreasing order.

Hoffman said western Europe had achieved "miracles" of production, had put an end to the "rampant inflation" of 1947-48, and had boosted trade within Europe to prewar levels.

But he told the committees that two huge problems remained—the shortage of dollars for buying essential goods and services, and the need for greater economic integration among the Marshall Plan countries.

Some Competition for U. S.

To bring the dollar gap to "manageable proportions" by 1952, he said, the Europeans would have to earn about a billion dollars more each year from sales in the United States, as well as from tourist expenditures and investments.

He conceded that this would mean some competition with American industries, but said the most that Europe could sell here in competitive goods would be less than 1 percent of the total American output.

"Europe must have dollars to buy goods from us, and if we don't want to give her those dollars we should let her earn them," he said. "Quite apart from the financial aspects of this problem, the relationship between the United States and Europe will never be on a sound basis until Europe is a cash-on-the-barrelhead customer, paying for what she gets."

When he dealt with the economic unification of western Europe, Hoffman said he was "disappointed" but not discouraged. He cited the record made by the Marshall Plan countries in getting rid of half their quantitative restrictions on trade, in negotiating a new payments union to get rid of monetary barriers to trade, and in appointing Dr. Dirk Stikker, Foreign Minister of the Nether-

U. S. Legation Nest of Spies, Red Bulgarian Press Charges

Sofia, Feb. 21 (AP).—The Communist press announced the indictment of five Bulgarians on charges of spying for the United States and termed the American legation here a spy nest a few hours before the United States broke diplomatic relations with Bulgaria today.

One of the Bulgarians, Michail Shipkov, 39, was quoted as saying he hid in the legation attic for several months before his arrest.

Washington's decision to end relations broke a 32-day impasse between the two countries. It was touched off January 19 when Bulgaria declared U. S. Minister Donald R. Heath persona non grata (unwanted) and demanded his recall. The United States threatened at

Vogeler Charge 'Trumped Up,' Ex-Hungarian Official Says

Two Codefendants Sentenced to Death

Budapest, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Robert A. Vogeler, United States communications executive, was sentenced to 15 years in prison today on charges of spying against Hungary.

(In Vienna, Mrs. Vogeler offered the Hungarians "anything . . . including myself" if they will free her husband. "I love him and need him for myself and the children," she said.)

The prosecution immediately said it will appeal on the grounds the sentence was "too lenient."

Both Vogeler and Edgar Sanders, his British business associate, who was sentenced to 13 years, announced appeals. Judge Vilmos Olthy said he will act on them within eight days.

Vogeler, 38, assistant vice president and eastern European manager for the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., and Sanders, Budapest manager for I. T. & T., were grim and pale, but firm of stride when their guards escorted them into the courtroom. They stood with arms folded during the sentencing. Neither showed emotion.

Vogeler, Sanders and five Hungarian codefendants all had pleaded guilty to espionage and economic sabotage during the trial that began Friday.

Dr. Nyaradi Terms Sabotage Impossible

By Alfred Friendly

New York, Feb. 21.—American businessman Robert Vogeler, convicted in a Hungarian court of sabotage, could not have committed sabotage if he had wanted to, according to a former Hungarian cabinet member.

Dr. Nicholas Nyaradi, minister of finance of the Hungarian government until he fled in December, 1948, said that for 18 months Vogeler's concern, the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., has been under the tightest and most rigid control of the Hungarian government's Communist Minister of Industry.

Special representatives of the ministry have been in control of I. T. & T. plants in Hungary since the summer of 1948, Nyaradi said at a press conference here today.

The "tragedy" of the situation, Nyaradi continued, "is that this American-owned plant was compelled to deliver to Russia, under

Picasso Wants To Bring Congress A Peace Formula

Paris, Feb. 21 (NYHT).—Pablo Picasso indicated today he would like to visit the United States—Washington especially—to present a peace program to Congress. His secretary outlined this idea in asking the American Embassy for visa application blanks.

The application likely would make the most-discussed painter of modern times the center of another controversy, but political this time. The Spanish-born artist is a Communist.

Communist sources said Picasso's mission would aim at having Congress end the arms race, ban the hydrogen and atomic bombs, stop the Indo-Chinese, Malayan and Indonesian fighting and favor the signature of a pact between the major powers.

Hotel Attic Swept By General-Alarm Fire in Laurel, Md.

Fire gutted the attic of the Laurel Park Hotel last night, just north of the race track on the Baltimore pike. No one was hurt.

The fire started in a clothes closet near a chimney on the top floor of the three-story frame structure, according to fire department officials. A general alarm brought apparatus from Branchville, Berwyn Heights and College Park to aid the Laurel firemen.

The manager, Mrs. Anna F. Shipe, said the fire was discovered at 8:30 p. m. by Paul Campbell, who lives in a trailer on hotel grounds. She said approximately 20 guests were registered. Damage was estimated at $4000.

U. S. Breaks With Sofia; Heath, Staff Are Recalled

Charge d'Affairs Here Is Called To State Dept., Ordered to Leave

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

The United States yesterday broke off relations with Bulgaria, one-time Balkan ally of Nazi Germany which now takes orders from Soviet Russia.

Donald R. Heath, American Minister to Bulgaria, was ordered by the State Department to leave Sofia, along with other members of the legation staff and their families.

Dr. Peter Voutov, Bulgarian Charge d'Affaires here, was summoned to the State Department and asked to leave the United States. He told reporters afterward, "I think the break is complete."

It was the first time the United States had broken off relations with another country since the end of World War II. The drastic step was taken, not because this Government disliked Bulgaria's Communist government or policies, but because it had become impossible for Minister Heath and his staff to perform their duties in Sofia.

Note Delivered Monday

A note delivered to the Bulgarian Foreign Office on Monday by Minister Heath said the United States had concluded that Bulgaria was "unwilling to maintain normal diplomatic relations with the United States." It accused the Bulgarian government (and controlled press) of "insulting the United States," of violating peace treaty obligations, and other offenses.

Two things led the United States Government to break off relations:

1. Bulgaria accused Minister Heath of plotting against the security of the "people's government," charging that he was in league with Traicho Kostov, former deputy prime minister, who was hanged for treason. The United States protested the charges as false, but Bulgaria came back with a demand that Heath be recalled. The next day, January 20 last, the United States told Bulgaria that unless it withdrew the demand and observed established diplomatic standards, it would break off relations.

Harassment of Heath

2. The Bulgarian government for some time had gone out of its way to make life hard for Minister Health and other American officials in Sofia. In its note of January 20, the United States charged that the Americans had been subjected to "a series of indignities and restrictions which have now made it virtually impossible for the legation to perform its normal diplomatic and consular functions." American officials, it was said at the State Department, had been denied gasoline and other facilities for travel; they had found it

Hundreds Killed In 12-Day Rioting On Indian Border

New Delhi, India, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Hundreds have been killed in Hindu-Moslem rioting that has raged for 12 days along the east Pakistan-India frontier, official Indian sources said tonight.

Bodies of 200 victims were cremated the first two days of the rioting in the east Pakistan city of Dacca, 150 miles northeast of Calcutta, the informants said.

Indian Premier Jawaharlal Nehru is understood to have sent an urgent message to Pakistan Premier Liaquat Ali Khan urging an immediate survey by his government of the areas in which, according to Indian reports, "massacres" continue.

Indian officials said the riots began February 10 when Moslems paraded in Dacca and distributed pamphlets—"printed in blood-colored ink"—demanding "revenge" on Hindus.

These informants asserted that the riots were the direct result of incitement by Moslem League members and alleged that Pakistan authorities did nothing to restrain them.

The Indian advices said that almost 5000 of the 8000 Hindus who live in Dacca had fled to refugee camps for safety.

Former U. S. Official Is Killed, Another Hurt in Auto Crash

A former State Department official and a salesman were killed in a head-on collision yesterday during a blinding snow storm near Green Bay, Wis., and Nathan P. Feinsinger, labor negotiator, was injured severely.

The State Department man was Carl H. Wedell, 44, director of the bureau of industrial psychology at the University of Wisconsin extension division. Before joining the university in 1947, he worked for the Navy and State Departments in Washington, serving on the State Department Board of Examiners for Foreign Service. He did psychological research for the Navy.

Feinsinger, who helped settle national steel, meat packing and the Hawaiian sugar disputes, was in a car with Wedell headed for Marinette, where the labor expert was to address a Wisconsin alumni dinner.

Their vehicle collided with a car driven by Stanley I. Bard, a salesman from Mount Vernon, N. Y., about 9 miles south of Green Bay on Route 41. Bard was killed. Sheriff's officers, according to the United Press, said Bard apparently was trying to pass a truck in the storm and hit the other car.

Feinsinger's head was driven through the windshield by the impact, and officers had to bend the steering wheel to free Professor

House Session of 36 Hours Possible in Fight Over FEPC

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Southern Democratic Congressmen organized yesterday for a "Calendar Wednesday" showdown on the Administration's FEPC bill today that may force the House into an unusual overtime session.

One Southern legislator said the Dixie opponents of FEPC "have enough ammunition to hold the House in session for 36 hours."

The melee will start when House Labor Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.), claims the floor to call up the controversial bill.

An outside possibility that a "non-penalty" FEPC bill may come out of the scuffle developed last night when a number of highly-placed Republicans lined up behind a substitute bill offered by Representative Samuel K. McConnell, jr. (R., Pa.).

McConnell's bill sets up a 5-man fair employment practice commission with broad fact-finding powers, but with no authority to enforce its findings.

Prospects for the substitute hinge on whether a substantial number of Southerners will vote with Republicans for the milder version of FEPC.

Reports of a "deal" along that pattern spread through the House lobbies yesterday but Southern strategists declined to confirm it. One said they might try to "perfect" the McConnell substitute, if

Rep. Case Enters Race for Senate In South Dakota

By the United Press

Representative Francis Case (R., S. D.) yesterday announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States Senator in South Dakota's June 6 primaries.

He said he decided to make the Senate race to alert his State to the fact that "our national life is in peril from a power-drunk, color-blind, inept and spendthrift leadership."

Case, a Congressman for 14 years, is a member of the House Appropriations and Un-American Activities Committees.

"No one bears the responsibility for this decision but myself," he said. "It is not easy to give up a seat in the House which many say I could keep with little campaign effort or personal expense."

Kansas Flapjack Flipper Fails To Equal Time of English Lass

Liberal, Kans., Feb. 21 (AP).—The old hands at the business of flapjack flipping won the first international pancake race between the women of Liberal and Olney, England, today.

The championship went to Miss Florience Callow, 18-year-old Olney girl in whose town pancake racing has been a Shrove Tuesday feature for some 515 years.

As the rules provide, Miss Callow tossed her pancake into the air three times and caught it in a frying pan while sprinting over a winding 415-yard course from Bull Tavern to St. Peter and St. Paul Church in Olney. She did it in 1 minute 10 2/5 seconds.

Five hours later a similar race—the first held here—was run over a course which wound around street corners in the Liberal business district. The winner was Mrs. Dale Warden, 22, who was clocked in 1 minute 18 seconds flat.

Mrs. Warden, pretty brunette wife of a gas pipeline company employe, came in about 10 yards ahead of the nearest of 21 other competitors, all of whom wore aprons or house dresses.

In Olney, Miss Callow said she was delighted to have won. She added: "I hope my friend in Liberal doesn't ache too much."

Tradition calls for a kiss to be bestowed on the winner. The honors here were done by H. Cotton Minchin, British Consul in Kansas City, and in Olney by the church verger, Will Mynard. The winner also gets a pressure cooker engraved: "Transatlantic Pancake Race, 1950, Olney, Bucks, England; Liberal, Kans., U. S. A."

Undercover Agent Lists Many as Reds

By The Associated Press

A Government undercover agent in the Communist Party testified yesterday that Reds control the Progressive Party in Pittsburgh.

Matthew Cvetic, 41-year-old Pittsburgh insurance salesman, identified scores of people as Communists and named numerous organizations he said the Communists control—like the American Slav Congress. Most of the names are not widely known.

Cvetic was giving the House Un-American Activities Committee chapter one of how he joined the Communist Party in 1943, worked his way up in it, and all the time filed secret reports to the FBI. He said he spent two years getting into the party and seven as an active member.

Today, he told reporters, there will be more details about the Progressive Party—the third party created in 1948 by former Vice President Henry A. Wallace.

MATTHEW CVETIC

Plans for Overthrow

Then, he said, he will go into Communist activities in the United Electrical Workers Union and the steel and coal industry and wind up with the story of Red plans for violent overthrow of the United States Government.

Cvetic said he was appearing before the committee by "mutual consent" with the FBI. He wasn't an actual FBI agent, he said, but the exact connection will come out later.

The story of his underground work in the Communist party began coming to light over the week end. Committee officials indicated that Cvetic is brining it out now, rather than remaining in the party, because of the strain and pressure he has been under for years.

His mother, Cvetic told reporters, died last October, believing him to be a Communist. But looking on proudly yesterday as he testified was one of his twin sons, 18-year-old Richard, who is in the Navy's music school here.

Cvetic said he isn't sure about the future but plans to return to Pittsburgh.

Not Afraid, He Says

"I don't think there will be reprisals," he told newsmen.

A small man with a pleasant smile, he added:

"I am an American. I'm not afraid. If an American has to be afraid of a Communist, it's too bad."

Cvetic told the committee that:

1. He wormed his way into the party after being approached by a Government agency in 1941 to do undercover work and later supplied reports to the FBI on Communist activities.

2. He was recruited into the party by an Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, with an Andy Novak helping with the application.

3. At the time he actually joined, in 1943, he was working for the United States Employment Service in Pittsburgh. He said that one Communist, Sidney Horwitz, was a senior interviewer in the agency. He named a Dorthy Sloan and a Pauline Roth Jacobs as other Communists in the Government agency.

Engineered Slav Group

4. The Community Party "engineered" the 1944 convention of the American Slav Congress. Cvetic became a member of the congress' executive board. He was assigned to carry the party line into the congress by Max Weiss, Dolly Gainor and Pete Karpa.

5. He helped organize a Communist cell in 1945-46 at the Crucible Steel Company in Pittsburgh. At one time the top membership in the cell was about 22. Among the leaders were Joseph Robinson and Zygmund Pascowski.

6. He first was assigned to the Tom Paine professional branch of the Communist Party in Pittsburgh. Among the persons he said were Communists he met in the professional branch were Steve Dedijer, now with the Yugoslav staff at the United Nations, and Lee Kogan, who was an organizer for the United Electrical Workers union.

Through his services in the professional branch of the party, Cvetic said, he learned that these persons were Communists:

Nancy and Abe Franks, Martin Krasich, Ann Lipkind, Jack Shore and his wife, Barbara; Mirko Markovitch, Paul Morrison, M. Y. Steinberg, and Jack Strobel.

In Pittsburgh, Martin Krasich, treasurer of the Croatian Fraternal Union, declared:

"The only thing I can say is that these charges are incorrect. I am not a member of the Communist Party or any other political party. I vote in the elections as I see fit."

Pittsburgh Attorney M. Y. Steinberg said:

"I'm a Progressive Party member. But when that becomes communism I want to know about it."

Steve Nelson, chairman of the Communist Party in Western Pennsylvania, declared he had known for six months that Cvetic is a FBI agent. Cvetic, however, contended Nelson discussed party secrets with him as late as last Friday.

Before the hearing, Frank S. Tavenner, jr., committee counsel, told reporters that Cvetic at times worked closely with Steve Nelson, identified by the committee as the Communist leader for Western Pennsylvania.

Senate Votes Today on Issue Of Probing McCarthy Charges

Administration leaders in the Senate last night asked that chamber to direct its Foreign Relations Committee to make a full investigation of charges that Communist spies are operating in the State Department.

A resolution directing the inquiry was presented to the Senate by Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), following a round of party conferences, but action was postponed until today.

Lucas urged immediate passage, saying the charge by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) that 81 un-named subversives are or have been employed by the department "casts a dark cloud of suspicion on the loyalty" of many Government workers.

Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) blocked immediate action, saying the proposed investigation was "too important" to hurry through the Senate.

GOP Wants Loyalty Files

Republicans meanwhile opened a drive to amend Lucas' resolution to "instruct" the Foreign Relations Committee to subpena department loyalty files, despite the President's executive order banning access to that data.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson denied the charges made by McCarthy in Senate speech Monday night. Acheson said there is "no question of the loyalty and devotion" of his employes.

A White House spokesman said he has "no reason to believe there is a card-carrying Communist among the White House advisers." McCarthy had said one of his 81 "cases" is now a White House speech writer.

Lucas' decision to request a Foreign Relations Committee inquiry followed a conference of Senate Democrats on the McCarthy speech, and a meeting of the Senate's top Democratic policy makers

Open Hearings Urged, Opposed

Brewster said the investigation will "employ every honorable means and parliamentary procedure permitted us under the rules of the House to prevent the enactment of this totalitarian measure."

Some Southerners are even planning to bring their lunch.

"But this won't be any ice cream party," Georgia's Representative Davis told reporters.

FEPC Battle in House Today

Progressives Hit Plan

As a growing number of Republicans declared for the substitute, a group of seven House GOP "progressives" issued a statement blasting "any attempt to remove from the FEPC bill adequate provisions for its enforcement."

The statement was signed by Representatives Clifford P. Case (R., N. J.), John W. Heselton (R., Mass.), Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.), Kenneth B. Keating (R., N. Y.), John P. Saylor (R., Pa.), Hugh D. Scott, jr., (R., Pa.) and Thor C. Tollefspn (R., Wash.).

At yesterday's caucus of some 100 Democrats from Southern and border States, Representative Howard W. Smith (D. Va.) was named "floor manager" of the Southern anti-FEPC forces. Representative James C. Davis (D. Ga.) was designated "assistant floor manager."

The Southern caucus adopted a resolution saying FEPC opponents

U. S. Tourist Jailed In Germany for Threat

Duesseldorf, Germany, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Edward C. Blum, 23, Chicago tourist, was sentenced to four months in prison by a British court today for allegedly threatening to kill a German waitress during a carnival celebration.

The court ordered Blum's sentence suspended after March 3, however, on condition of good prison behavior. Blum said he had come to Hilden, Germany, to visit his parents.

District to Test Discrimination 1872 and 1873 Laws in Court taurants and other eating and drinking establishments but did not mention hotels, barber shops or bath houses.

The penalty for violation of either act was a fine of one hundred dollars and forfeiture of license for a year.

The Commissioners ordered the test case after Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West told them that exhaustive search failed to disclose "any express repeal" of the two acts.

West said that "implied repeal" of the acts could be argued either way.

Also in question is whether the 1873 act superseded or merely amended the act of the previous year.

The Commissioners said that the next complaint of discrimination in a restaurant would be prosecuted to determine legality of the act of 1873.

They said that prosecution of other complaints "will be held in abeyance pending a final judicial decision" of the test case.

In ordering the law tested, the Commissioners said they felt a decision by them "as to the present effectiveness of these acts would be inconclusive because it is a matter which ultimately must be decided by the courts."

Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association issued the following statement late last night:

"The Washington Restaurant Association has carefully considered the direction of the D. C. Commissioners to the corporation counsel that he institute proceedings to test the validity of the unused three-quarter-century-old Legislative Assembly act involving the question of segregation in local eating places.

"The association recommends that each eating place continue its past practice until a court of competent jurisdiction declares it to be a violation of law."

The "exhaustive search" into the validity of the two laws was undertaken last June by Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher at the request of the Commissioners. Maher's report formed the basis of yesterday's decision.

Attention had been drawn to the long forgotten statutes by the report of the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital.

The report, printed in December 1948, pointed out that during the period when Washington had the vote, the popularly elected assembly had passed a law giving Negroes equal rights in restaurants, hotels, barber shops, and other places of public accommodation.

The report said that about 1900 of these laws "mysteriously disappeared" from the compiled statutes of the District. Authors of the report speculated that the laws might still be in effect.

The question was brought to a head last month when four persons filed a complaint in the corporation counsel's office charging violation of the acts.

They said they were refused service at Thompson's Cafeteria, 725 14th st. nw. Three of the persons were Negroes and among them was Dr. Mary Church Terrell, prominant educator and former member of the District Board of Education.

West said yesterday this case would not be prosecuted but that a new case would be sought. He said he would not look for a case until Thursday to be sure that all restaurants had been warned of possible prosecution.

Coalition Cabinet Possibility Slight

London, Feb. 21 (AP).—Conservative Leader Winston Churchill made this comment tonight when asked about the possibility of a coalition government as a result of Thursday's election:

"I do not believe in a coalition that is made up of a lot of little petty deals between interests and political forces."

There has been speculation that if the election is close—as many observers now believe—the only way a workable majority can be fashioned in the new Parliament is by a coalition. The Laborites already have said they want no part of such a grouping of parties if the voters fail to return them to control of Parliament.

The two major figures in the election, Churchill and Prime Minister Clement Attlee, were in high good humor as they campaigned in their home districts. In various parts of Britain leading political orators returned from the hustings to their home stamping grounds for eleventh-hour pleas for victory.

Attlee Denies U. S. Rift

For most of them it was their next-to-last big speech-making fling before the nation's 34 million voters decide the fate of the Socialist Labor government.

Attlee denied Conservative allegations that the Labor Party indulges in class warfare. He conceded that the party originated as a class organization but said the present group "embraced people of all creeds and all classes." Attlee talked to several small groups in Walthamstow West, a London suburb.

In West Java

Indonesians Lose 1240 in City Defense

Jakarta, Java (Wednesday), Feb. 22 (AP).—A total of 1240 Indonesian soldiers have been killed defending a west Java city against invaders of Darul Islam, it was reported here today.

The battle for Tasikmalaja, between the Indonesian army and the fanatical Moslem movement which aims to set up an Islamic state of Indonesia, has been raging for the past 10 days, ever since Dutch forces pulled out and left defenses to the Republican army.

President Soekarno said last week forces under Dutch renegade RPP "Turk" Westerling have infiltrated Darul Islam, making it a potent rebel force in west Java. Delayed reports reaching here gave this picture:

After the first five-hour pitched battle in the streets, the Darul Islam units withdrew from Tasikmalaja. The invaders returned the following night, freed 29 prisoners and killed an additional 11 Indonesian soldiers.

Since these two attacks by the fanatical Moslems there has been almost continuous rifle fire heard day and night.

Dutch army sources said the Netherlands army has postponed its scheduled withdrawal from Garoet, a sister city of Tasikmalaja.

Earlier Test Of Pregnancy Is Reported

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—A new test to detect pregnancy within three weeks after conception is reported in a new medical journal, Fertility and Sterility, published today.

The test also gives warning of the danger of loss of the unborn baby.

It was developed by Dr. Edmond J. Farris of the Wistar Institute of Anatomy and Biology in Philadelphia.

The test gives its answer in 24 hours, he said. Urine from a woman is injected under the skin of immature female rats. If the woman is pregnant, the rats' ovaries become red, and filled with blood.

The test can detect pregnancy as early as three weeks after conception occurs, Dr. Farris said; that is, by the thirty-fourth day after the beginning of the woman's last monthly cycle. A woman's fertile time usually comes during the twelfth to fourteenth day of the normal 28-day cycle.

Existing tests using rats, mice, rabbits, toads or frogs are not effective until about six weeks after the start of the last cycle.

A strong reaction in the new test indicates the pregnancy will be successful and go full term, Dr. Farris said. But a weak reaction indicates a spontaneous abortion is likely to occur.

Battle May Get Virginia Rent Measure Today

By a Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Feb. 21.—Governor Battle probably will receive the Boatwright bill decontroling rents throughout the State on Wednesday. He is expected to sign immediately.

The bill, passed by both houses of the General Assembly, is being printed in Baltimore. A technical change must be made in its title before it can become law, but this is expected to be adopted immediately by the Legislature.

The House committee on general laws is expected to consider the Magruder bill to restore controls in localities at its meeting Thursday.

People Want Peace Parley, Stassen Says

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Harold E. Stassen said tonight a great majority of the American people believe a mid-century peace conference should be sought between Russia and the United States.

The former Minnesota Governor proposed such a top-level conference in a speech last Saturday at Grand Rapids, Mich., and the response was overwhelming, he told the New York Young Republican Club.

Stassen said the conference should be held on neutral ground, such as Stockholm, Helsinki or Vienna.

"We must not go to Moscow," he added, "and neither should we haughtily say we will meet them in Washington."

The GOP leader and University of Pennsylvania president said the American delegation must be bipartisan. He suggested as members President Truman, Secretary of State Acheson, Defense Secretary Johnson, Republican Senators Vandenberg and Taft, Bernard Baruch and military men including Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Bipartisan moves in the international field, Stassen said, have been successful while "solo ventures" by the Truman Administration have failed. Stassen proposed that every word at the conference be recorded and published at its end.

He also said the president of the United Nations should be invited to sit in and that England and France should be represented.

"If these conditions are met," he added, "there is everything to gain for the future peace and progress of mankind in seeking such a conference, and nothing to lose."

CAMPAIGNING IN BRITAIN — Winston Churchill, Britain's Conservative Party leader, fighting to regain control of the government in Thursday's general election, doffs his hat as a crowd surrounds him following a speech in Manchester. State Won't Ask Death for Dr. Sander

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 12 (AP).—The death penalty will not be sought in the "mercy" death trial of Dr. Hermann N. Sander, prosecuting officials disclosed tonight.

Hillsboro County Solicitor William H. Craig said an agreement that the State would not press for the supreme penalty was reached even before the selection of prospective jurors began.

Under New Hampshire law, death by hanging in first-degree murder conviction is imposed only on recommendation of the jury. Unless the prosecution demands the death penalty the jury cannot recommend that, Craig said.

The mandatory penalty in New Hampshire for conviction of murder in the first degree is life imprisonment unless the jury recommends death.

Attorney General William L. Phinney and Craig already have informed the court, Craig said, they were not seeking the death penalty but "definitely" were pressing the first degree murder charge.

The pace of the trial slowed noticeably today.

A British-born juror—oldest of the nine selected in yesterday's opening session—was removed on a prosecution challenge. Hours later his replacement was chosen. Then, shortly before court adjourned until Wednesday, a tenth juror was accepted.

Three jurors remain to be impaneled. One will be an alternate.

All the jurors chosen to date are men. Nine are marred, one is a widower, and five are fathers. Their average age is 53.

Seven are Catholics, one is a Protestant Episcopalian, one a Baptist and one a Methodist.

Widower Louis C. Cutter, a 38-year-old mill worker, succeeded the juror removed at the morning session—Alfred Baines, 72, a Presbyterian. Cutter, a Methodist, is the youngest accepted until now.

Sixty-three of the 145 veniremen have been questioned and two of the seven women on the list already have been excused.

Sources outside the courtroom revealed that Baines' son works for a Manchester credit bureau which did "some work" for defense counsel in checking prospective jurors.

Charged with murder, the 41-year-old country doctor is accused of injecting air into the veins of Mrs. Abbie Borroto, 59, a hopeless cancer patient, to end her suffering.

Residents of this mill city of 80,000 are taking the trial without any undue excitement. While the Sander case is the favorite topic of discussion, only a handful have ventured out of their way in the earmuff weather to get a glimpse of the principals entering and leaving the courthouse. Spectators are barred from the courtroom.

Counsel for Sander will wait until all State witnesses have testified before giving their opening statements.

Bombers Hit At Shanghai And Nanking

Taipei, Formosa, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—The Nationalist air force returned today to Shanghai and Nanking, blasting power plants with 500-pound bombs in another round of its campaign to cripple Communist industry.

At the same time a military spokesman said the navy had repulsed five small landing attempts on Hainan Island in recent weeks and that earlier predictions the Communists might invade Hainan during the Chinese New Year were not borne out.

Dispatches from Hainan said reports of fighting there referred to skirmishes with guerillas in the Nationalists' efforts to mop up the pro-Communist island forces.

The Communist radio said the Red armies finally had occupied the southwestern China city of Kunming, capital of Yunnan Province, after two months fighting.

Reds in Americas Discussed With Peron by U. S. Aide

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—The spread of Communist influence in the Americas has been a major topic of current conversations between President Juan D. Peron and Assistant United States Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, jr., a reliable source reported tonight.

Peron told Miller communism has been practically wiped out in Argentina, thanks to measures taken by his government, the informant said.

Miller was reported to have expressed uneasiness regarding the loose wording of Article 40 of the new Argentine constitution, dealing with expropriation of public utilities by the state.

It was understood Peron said the Congress would shortly discuss a new law setting up regulations for private foreign capital.

Moslem-Christian Riot in Eritrea Kills 11, Hurts 50

Asmara, Eritrea, Feb. 21 (AP).—Sword-wielding Moslems and Christians clashed in a riot today. Incomplete casualty figures indicated at least 11 dead and 50 wounded, and fighting still was raging at 10 o'clock tonight.

British troops, occupying this former Italian colony in East Africa since the war, rushed to the riot scene to reinforce the police.

(An Arab news agency dispatch to Cairo said American troops also were involved. American sources expressed skepticism, however, saying the only United States servicemen there is a small group of Army and Navy technicians who operate the Asmara radio relay station.

The rioting was touched off last night by the slaying of a Moslem minor official.

AEC Speeds Plans To Train Scientists

Oak Ridge, Tenn., Feb. 21 (U.P.)—The Atomic Energy Commission announced a speed-up today in the training of scientists and engineers to build and operate atomic machines for powering airplanes, ships and industrial plants.

Federal officials last November 28 disclosed the establishment of a commission reactor development program to train "as quickly as possible" Government and industrial researchers in development of these machines. Regular classes are to begin next September.

Today the commission said "current requirements of the AEC program" have demanded the organization of a "preliminary class" to begin March 6. It will be attended by 19 representatives of industry, the Navy and Air Force.

Among them are representatives from electric boat companies, the Navy Bureau of Ships, Government shipyards and from the nuclear energy for the propulsion of aircraft project of the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corp. here. The latter is a highly secret project that has been under way in Oak Ridge since the end of the war.

Those to attend the September course will include industrial engineers, Government employes, recent college graduates hired by the Oak Ridge national laboratory and engineering school staff members.

Parks Buried; Gun Tested In Shooting

Luray, Va., Feb. 21 (AP).—A survivor of the Bataan death march, shot fatally at his home near here Saturday night, was buried today with military honors.

More than 1000 persons crowded in and about the small Bethlehem Christian Church for the funeral service for Robert Franklin Parks, 38, retired Army captain.

The American Flag on the casket was removed and handed to Parks' widow, Mrs. Barbara Parks, 26, who has been held, without charge, in the Page County Jail here since Sunday in connection with the shooting.

Mrs. Parks was accompanied by Sheriff Abram Brubaker and Deputy Sheriff Henry Gander. The two officers remained outside the church.

As the rites were held, Page County authorities continued their investigation of the shooting, which occurred shortly before midnight Saturday at the Parks' home.

Army Sends Force To Build Eniwetok A-Test Facilities

By The Associated Press

The Army is sending a construction force to the Pacific atoll of Eniwetok to help build facilities for periodic tests of atomic weapons there.

The Defense Department and the Atomic Energy Commission announced yesterday that part of this construction force, which consists of the headquarters of the Seventh Engineer Brigade, the 79th Engineer Construction Battalion and supporting service units, will leave soon. Brig. Gen. Frederick B. Butler will be in command.

The Atomic Energy Commission previously announced a contract with Holmes and Narver, Los Angeles engineering firm, to design and construct semi-permanent housing, utilities and communications on the atoll. The Army troops will help them.

A joint task force commanded by Lieut. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada is now preparing for an atomic test on Eniwetok at an undisclosed date.

4 Allies Plan Fleet Games In Atlantic

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Warships and planes of the American, British, Canadian and Netherlands navies will stage large-scale combined war games in the Atlantic and Caribbean next month, it was announced last night.

The unprecedented fleet exercises will feature antisubmarine warfare and defense against air attack—two fields of naval operations with which the North Atlantic powers probably would be most occupied in a war with Russia.

For while possessing only a negligible surface fleet, the USSR has the world's largest submarine force and the biggest land-based air force.

Taking part in the mid-March maneuvers will be seven aircraft carriers, the battleship Missouri, five cruisers, eleven submarines, 40 destroyer types, three sloops, two tenders, two blimp squadrons, ten patrol bomber squadrons and the carrier planes.

2 Separate Operations Planned

Two separate operations will be staged. The British and Canadian forces will join with part of the United States Atlantic Fleet to hold Operation Caribex. Simultaneously, Dutch forces will combine with other American vessels in another exercise.

In the first phase of Caribex, the first striking force—made up of the American carriers Philippine Sea and Wright, the Missouri, three cruisers and 16 destroyers—will make a passage from a point west of Martinique to a point south of Guantanamo Bay.

It will be supported by a submarine hunter-killer force consisting of the escort carriers Palau and Mindoro, 15 destroyers and two blimp squadrons, and an air reconnaissance force of 10 patrol squadrons.

Opposing it will be 11 United States submarines and the second striking force. The latter will consist of the Canadian flattop Magnificent, the Canadian destroyer Micmac, the British cruiser Glasgow and the British sloops Snipe and Sparrow.

Guantanamo Air Strike

As this exercise concludes, the two forces will combine to make a mock air strike against Guantanamo, followed by antiaircraft drills. The ships then will refuel at sea—an old story to the American ships—and simulate replenishing stores and ammunition.

Meanwhile, the Dutch carrier Karel Doorman, supported by a Netherlands cruiser and sloop, will carry on joint exercises with the American carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt and eight destroyer types near Guantanamo. At its close, the Dutch ships will continue their spring training cruise.

Then the FDR and destroyers will join the American, Canadian and British vessels for the second half of Caribex. The entire fleet, with tankers and supply ships, will then sail from the Antilles to just off Charleston, S. C., under "attack' by the patrol bombers and submarines. And the American carrier pilots and Canadian airmen will "bomb" each other's ships.

Vice Adm. Donald B. Duncan will command the American forces, while Rear Adm. Thomas S. Combs will head the United States forces in the Netherlands exercises. Vice Admiral R. V. Symonds-Taylor commands the British-Canadian forces and Rear Adm. J. J. L. Willinge the Dutch units.

Prince Georges Asked To Get Park Tract

The East Pines Citizens Association yesterday urged the Prince Georges County Commissioners to investigate the possibility of purchasing a 2000-acre tract adjoining the housing development at Greenbelt.

The association suggested the tract could be used as a park for recreational purposes.

Phone Strike Negotiations Hit Dead End

Latest Government efforts to avert the impending Nation-wide telephone strike, scheduled for Friday morning, ran into a dead end yesterday when Western Electric Co. refused to participate in negotiations here with the CIO Communication Workers of America.

The negotiations session had been called in Washington yesterday by Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, because, as he pointed out, he also is representing the Government in the coal negotiations.

Representatives of Western Electric, a subsidiary of the Bell Telephone System, appeared here yesterday to tell Ching that their company was willing to bargain collectively—but in New York, where the talks up to now have been fruitless.

Company's Explanation

The official reason given, according to Government mediation officials, was that Western Electric would find it too cumbersome to move its negotiators and records to Washington.

Ching, in explaining the situation, said Western Electric's attitude was "very disappointing." He said that the company didn't make any excuse "which appeared to me to be satisfactory." In reply to a reporter's question, Ching commented that Western Electric gave the impression it was "not enough concerned to be here today," despite the imminence of a srike by Western Electric workers.

Around 16,000 Western Electric union employes, including 500 here, are planning to walk out at 6 a. m. Friday to win a 15-cents-an-hour "package" improvement in their contract. Altogether, 100,000 CWA members are due to strike that morning, and keep 150,000 other CWA workers out by means of picket lines. Such action would stop work for 5500 telephone operators and plant employes in the Washington area.

Negotiations Fall Down

Meanwhile, the Communication Workers, irked by Western Electric's refusal to participate in the Government-sponsored talks here, refused to resume negotiations with Western Electric in New York. "The company has shown its contempt for the American people and their Government," commented A. T. Jones, union vice president.

With no indication of a break in the phone dispute, it was unofficially, but strongly, hinted by Government informants last night that a fact-finding board, outside the Taft-Hartley Act and similar to last year's steel board, will be set up by the President to sift the telephone controversy and come up with recommendations for a solution.

Employes Lose Decision

In New Jersey, a fact-finding panel, acting under State legislation, recommended that the major demands of the New Jersey Bell employes be denied. This decision throws the statewide dispute over wages, pensions, and progression scales into arbitration.

In Washington no progress was reported by CWA Divisions 36 and 50 with Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., a Bell unit. Glenn Watts, president of Division 36 (plane employes), charged management negotiators were "stalling" because they refused, he said, to meet the union bargainers until Thursday, after yesterday morning's session. C. H. Johnson, C.&P. vice president, insisted there was "perfect agreement" for the Thursday meeting.

Both locals of CWA are taking strike votes among their members in order to be in a legal position to strike March 2 on their own. Should the 500 Western Electric workers here picket C.&P. centrals, the operators and plant employes plan to respect picket lines.

British Election Film

A British film "General Election" and a new six-reel film on the Belgian Congo will be presented by the Washington World Affairs Center at 8 p. m. Thursday in the Department of Interior auditorium, 18th and C sts. nw.

Movie Houses Here Get Heat Despite Strike by Engineers

The strike of 26 stationary engineers who man the heating plants of six Washington theaters was described yesterday by the theater operators as "unauthorized, unnecessary and unwarranted."

The theaters are the Warner, the Metropolitan and the Tivoli of the Warner Brothers chain; the Capitol and the Palace of the Loew's chain, and the Trans-Lux.

The strikers are members of Local 99, International Union of Operating Engineers (AFL). They walked out at 12:01 a.m. yesterday in a dispute over wages.

Despite the strike and the frigid weather, the theater operators said their movie houses and their office buildings were well heated by emergency means yesterday.

Brylawski Comments

A. Julian Brylawski, Warner Brothers executive and president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of Metropolitan Washington, said:

"We have been reliably informed that Local 99 has called this strike withut authorization of the international of the union."

It was Brylawski, who is also chairman of his association's wage scale committee, who charged the strike is "unauthorized, unnecessary and unwarranted."

He said the Wage Scale Committee had been negotiating the issue of wages with the local since last August 31, and had offered the local "a most fair rate of increase."

According to Brylawski, the union demanded an increase of wage scale up to 42 percent more than the present scale.

Brylawski said the Wage Scale Committee met in New York last Thursday with Jesse West, business agent of the local; James Inman, president of the local, and Richard Nowland, international vice president.

"At the meeting," declared Brylawski, "it was agreed to refer all demands to the local union and continue negotiations without a strike or threat of a strike."

Brylawski said the Wage Scale Committee was "amazed" when West announced last Saturday afternoon that unless the local's demands were met by 12:01 a. m. yesterday the strike would be called and the theaters picketed.

West Cites Offer

West said the "fair rate of increase" offered by the theater operators was a flat five-cents-an-hour across the board. He said the 26 men employed at the six theaters voted unanimously against accepting this offer and to strike.

Asked if the strike was unauthorized by the international, West said he had received a telegram from Arthur Hill, administrative assistant to William E. Maloney, international president, advising him the local was "strictly on its own" in taking a strike action.

Move Approved to End D. C. Personal Effects Tax

The Commissioners yesterday formally approved and ordered necessary legislation drafted on a proposal to abolish the District personal property tax on household effects.

They had given the plan general approval when it was recommended three weeks ago by Assessor Edward A. Dent. Formal action was delayed until legal and budget officials could study it.

Following Dent's recommendation, the bill will provide for abolishing the tax as of fiscal 1952—which starts July 1, 1951. The fiscal 1951 budget, which anticipates revenue from the tax, has already gone to Congress for approval.

The Commissioners are seeking to abolish only the tax on household furnishings, jewelry and automobiles for sale. Personal property taxes on automobiles and business and other tangible property not held would remain.

FACTS About the Coal Crisis

For more than eight months, coal operators have been trying to make a contract with the mine workers' union. Before any new contract could be made, two union demands had to be eliminated:

1. Complete domination of coal production by the union, through its insistence on the "able and willing" and "memorial" clauses;

2. Insistence by the union on the power to exact enormous sums of money from employers to be spent as the union dictates on "welfare" for union members.

Federal Judge Richmond B. Keech upheld the view of the operators that these demands were not bargainable—were, indeed, illegal.

On "able and willing," Judge Keech said:

"Good faith does not permit such extraneous and unlawful provisions to be insisted upon by an employee group as a condition of wage agreement. To include such provisions would be tantamount to nullifying any agreement reached at its birth . . .

"The court concludes that insistence upon inclusion of the so-called 'able and willing' and 'memorial period' clauses in the negotiation of an agreement is a refusal to confer in good faith, and therefore a practice condemned by (the law)."

On union dictation and control of "welfare," Judge Keech declared:

"It is the opinion of the court that insistence that the welfare and retirement fund be administered so as to limit the benefits thereunder to union members and their dependents without compliance with the statutory requirements for a closed shop agreement, is in conflict with (the law)."

There can be no appeasement—no compromise—on these two fundamental issues.

AS TO THE SO-CALLED "MONEY ISSUES":

The ruthless power of the labor dictator is being used to "Kill the goose that lays the golden eggs."

Under the expired contract, wages, which the coal operators have offered to continue, are higher than those paid in any other major industry. The average hourly wage is $1.95 per hour, compared to $1.67 per hour in all manufacturing. This rate is also paid for lunch periods and "travel time," making the average underground earnings $2.40 per productive hour. In addition, vacation pay ($100.00 a year), social security, welfare and other payments increase labor costs to about $2.74 per productive hour.

Although the basic wage rate is $14.05 per day, on the basis of 6½ hours of actual work in underground mines, many rates are higher, so that the average daily pay amounts to $15.60.

If the additional labor costs are included, the figure is $17.81 per day.

Again and again, union monopoly in the coal industry has brought the country to the point of crisis to enforce its demands.

Since more than 60 per cent of the cost of mining coal is paid for labor, the price of coal to consumers has risen again and again.

Obviously, if this industry is to survive, there must be a stopping point.

Markets for coal are shrinking. It does not make sense to raise costs when markets are shrinking. That is the way to price the industry—operators—miners—railroads—retailers—out of the coal business.

The net effect is that union dictatorship is killing off the industry, is killing off jobs for miners. In the process, it is bringing suffering and hardship to all.

The Coal Operators Are Eager for a Working Contract with their Employees

There can be no true security for the American worker, no steady progress for American industry, as long as UNION MONOPOLY can dictate when a man shall work and when industry shall produce. There can be no sure protection for the American public as long as UNION MONOPOLY is free to shake its fist in the face of all!

U. S. Eyes Tygoons' Tax, Holland Says

Senator Holland (D., Fla.) said yesterday he has been advised that "every possible big time racketeer" is under watch for possible income tax evasion.

But he said he was told that these people generally are careful to report on all their earnings.

Holland wired the information to Jack R. Younger, president of the Greater Miami, Fla., Crime Commission, after Younger had suggested a Federal tax evasion investigation. Younger, in a telegram to Holland, said "south Florida is now beset with rackets controlled by interstate gangs."

Holland said he had discussed the tax evasion question with W. H. Woolf, chief of the intelligence unit of the Treasury Department.

Woolf urged that Younger meet with Treasury Agent James D. Brown in Miami and "pass on any information as to possible income tax violations."

Woolf told Holland racketeers are careful to report their earnings. In addition, he said, Internal Revenue agents are continually checking all gambling activities to make sure the Federal Government is receiving the proper tax.

Father Killed, Teacher Says

Hockersmith, 26, 1847 Mintwood pl. nw., a teacher at the Clara Barton school in Cabin John, Md.

The police were told by Mrs. Hockersmith Sunday night that James had been shot by one of his sons, Carson James, 27, in 1947, and buried in the cowshed behind his wife's home. It was the first indication of foul play in James' disappearance.

The sheriff said the slaying account was also confirmed by another son, Hugh James, 18, and a daughter, Mrs. Harold Martin of Chelsea, Mich.

Hubbell said Carson James, now a Marine, is believed to be en route to a Marine base in California.

Hubbell said that other members of the family told him Carson James "blasted the old man because he was so mean to the family."

Mrs. Hockersmith's Story Of Her Father's Death

Mrs. Hockersmith said yesterday that she had known of her father's death since Christmas, 1947, when Carson told her he had shot the father and, with the help of "some of the boys" buried the body beneath the cowshed.

She said that the family in Clawson "put out the story that dad had disappeared."

Until that time, she said, she believed that her father was still alive. Mrs. Hockersmith said that her father was "the kind of man who used to come and go as he pleased."

"He never got along with mother or any of us. I hated him," she declared. The disappearance story, she said, made sense because her father was a man who had "no friends."

Mrs. Hockersmith said that her brother Carson "told me that he'd shut me up if I said anything" about the slaying.

After talking with Carson in 1947, Mrs. Hockersmith said, she went to Clawson for a Christmas visit and found that her mother, five brothers and a sister all knew about the shooting.

At the time it happened, she explained, her father was living alone in Clawson and her mother and three brothers, Hugh, Howard and Justice, were living in a house near Clawson. Carson was home on leave. A brother Ralph was away serving with the Air Corps and a sister, now Mrs. Harold Martin, a teacher at Chelsea, Mich., was away at school.

"Mother felt that it would be better for everyone's sake if no one said anything about it. I didn't know what to do. Carson was stationed right here in Washington all this time and had threatened me," Mrs. Hockersmith said yesterday.

Mrs. Hockersmith said that she learned from Carson that he was being transferred to California on Friday and was leaving Washington Saturday.

She said her husband, Frank, whom she married last May, had asked her about why Carson sent money home all the time, and why he was attempting to buy the father's house.

On Sunday, she said, she told her husband what Carson had told her in 1947.

Hockersmith, a painting contractor, said he went to police in Washington after hearing the story, but "did not get any cooperation," so called Clawson police on Sunday night to tell them the story.

Mrs. Hockersmith described Carson as a "brilliant boy" who "doesn't drink or run around" and said "he was the one my dad was nicest to."

Philip F. Maguire, Aide To Steelman, Resigns

Philip F. Maguire of Plainfield, N. J., has resigned as an aide to Dr. John R. Steelman, assistant to President Truman. Dr. Steelman accepted the resignation yesterday, effective February 25.

Maguire said he will enter law practice here.

coming schedule of hearings. He said there will probably be no more sessions this week, but that they probably will be resumed next week. The after-hours club place of the hearings is now completed, he indicated.

Davis said sex crime have "just been running wild" in the District. He said the general problem is a far more serious one than that involved in the operating of after-hours clubs. He said the committee probably will go into specific sex crime cases in its hearings.

Atlas Club Testimony

Garrett Francis Quinn, president and general manager of the Atlas, testified before Covell and said that it was the policy of the club not to allow gambling. He admitted however, that he had been convicted "two or three times" for gambling.

Covell investigated reports that a local businessman had lost $20,000 in a crap game at the Atlas Club on January 20. A prominent lawyer was said to have won $7500.

Quinn was not on the premises when Covell investigated January 24, the captain testified. Later in the evening, however, Quinn came down to police headquarters and Covell testified, and said "he was sorry he had kept me waiting and said I would not have any more complaints."

Day's Fireworks

Albert B. Glickfield, president of the Gold Key Club, 606 E st. nw., produced the day's fireworks when he joined Blick, Covell and Beach at the witness table.

Covell described a day in 1948 when he arrested Glickfield at the Gold Key in a raid that led to his conviction and a $200 fine.

Covell said he had seized $232 worth of whisky in cases. "I considered this odd in view of the fact that persons are supposed to bring their own bottles to after-hours clubs," he said. The cases were purchased at three stores, Covell testified.

Glickfield jumped to his feet and shouted that as long as he had been in Washington "I never bought a single bottle of whisky at any one of those stores."

About Those Bottles

Covell said he also seized 17 bottles containing a brand of whisky different from the bottle label; "refills" he called them. He said he found 380 bottles with names on them, although some of the names were not listed on the membership roster, and 222 bottles without names.

Glickfield objected again. He accused Captain Covell "or some of your men" of putting bottled whisky into cases after the raid. "Those were soda bottle cases, not whisky," he said.

Representative Olne Teague (D., Tex.), acting chairman, quieted the disputants with "Gentlemen, we are not trying that case again."

Yesterday's hearing alo brought forward officials of the fifteenth after-hours club to receive committee subpenas—the Turf and Grid Club, 1337 14th st. nw., represented by Richard O'Connell, and Eugene Augusterfer, two of its three operators.

They said the third owner, Tommy Wiman, club president, is in Florida. They said their lawyer was Charles E. Ford whose name has turned up at other points in the hearing. Ford was back in Florida yesterday, according to his law associate, H. Clifford Allder. He is expected in Washington Monday.

Ford, whose testimony first was sought by the Davis committee last Friday, went to Florida that day; the committee heard about his trip Saturday; Ford was back in town Sunday to attend a funeral Monday. Davis has indicated he may be subpenaed later if his testimony still is wanted.

Say Wiman Has Records

O'Connell, secretary-treasurer of the Turf and Grid, and Augusterfer, one of the organizers, testified that Wiman had all the records.

O'Connell said he had been employed in various Government agencies—including the National Recovery Administration, the Wage Hour Division and the Interior Department—before going into the restaurant business here. He said his Government jobs were not under Civil Service.

Augusterfer testified he put up about $3000 and the other two about $1000 each to start the club. Each drew $100 a week until about a year ago; then cut their salaries to $50 a week. Checks against the club's bank account require the signatures of two of the three officers, they testified.

O'Connell said the club was formed in the hope that it would be a good business, and that it has been running as a business.

Question of Immunity

Both witnesses were advised by Fischbach that they did not have to answer questions he might ask about conversations they had with Ford when they went to see him about getting a charter for their club. Augusterfer accepted this immunity; O'Connell indicated he was willing to answer questions, but when they were asked he testified he could not recall details of the conversations.

O'Connell said the general outline of the talk with Ford was that the three partners wanted to form a club and wanted a charter for it. He said he could not recall if they told Ford they were going into business.

Augusterfer said one of his ideas in helping set up the club was that it would provide an annual scholarship to put a needy boy through college. He pointed out he had been in athletics and coaching all his life. He conceded the club had not yet sent any needy boy to college.

Aided Baseball Team

O'Connell said the club had bought uniforms for a baseball team in the Merrick Boys Club—he referred at first to the club as the Merrick Police Boys Club, but Fischbach a moment later announced he had been handed a memo that the Merrick club was not connected with the Metropolitan Police Boys Club. O'Connell said the boys won a trophy and "we gave them a small dinner at the club."

Augusterfer said there had been no gambling at the club, that sometimes the help would sit down for a little game of cards, but that "we try to run a nice, respectable place."

O'Connell said cards had been played there on rare occasion, but there was no crap shooting, and there is no payoff from the two pinball machines.

After the two owners of the Turf and Grid had testified, Capt. Charles J. Sullivan, the new captain of No. 2 Precinct, told Fischbach that "at no time have we had any complaints against the Turf and Grid." Captain Sullivan was not a witness.

Edward "Patsy" Meserole, secretary of the Stagecrafters Club, was called back to the witness chair briefly to testify about his proposal of last year for District licensing of after-hour clubs. Fischbach's questioning brought out that Meserole, in presenting the plan to District officials, had argued that eliminating the clubs would mean the birth of "buffet flats, blind pigs, and speakeasies" in the District, and would result in increased prostitution, robbery and murder.

How, asked Fischbach, do the after-hours clubs work to reduce the number of murders. Meserole answered by contrasting the after-hours clubs—open places where many people walk in—with "buffet flats," where one or two customers might easily be robbed, or if they rebelled, might be beaten or killed.

Beach's Slant on Clubs

Captain Beach told the committee that when he took command of the gambling squad in 1945, the after-hours clubs were operating "primarily as gambling joints." At that date the clubs were "breeding places of crime." Beach agreed.

"That situation no longer exists."

Now, Beach said, the clubs represent unwarranted competition to legitimate business interests. "We can only charge these after-hour clubs with misdemeanors," he said, "and misdemeanors don't mean anything to the operators."

Legitimate tavern owners have to pay $850 for a liquor license, Beach said.

William J. Edwards, 12 S st. nw., a giant of a man who had interrupted previous hearings with loud snores, was the day's last witness. He testified that he had run an after-hour club, known as the Stardust Whist Club, at 1919 14th st., for about 12 months but had "unincorporated" the club because he and his four partners could not agree.

He testified that he had run the club "strictly as a business," in response to a question from Fischbach.

"America has furnished to the world the character of Washington. And if our American institutions had done nothing else, that alone would have entitled them to the respect of mankind."

DANIEL WEBSTER
At the completion of the Bunker Hill Monument (June 12, 1843)

"Doing nothing" is not the principle, the policy, nor the practice that has brought our country to the leadership of all the nations of the world. It's doing something about every problem that confronts us that has spelt the "reason why" American initiative and industry have given our country the highest standard of living in the history of mankind.

On this, the birthday of our First President, we should all pause in our day's activity to pay homage to the vision, determination, and leadership of GEORGE WASHINGTON, the man who played such an important part in making us what we are today.

House Group Backs Co-op Housing Bill

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Administration's over-all housing bill, including provision for "middle-income" housing, sped through the House Banking and Currency Committee yesterday with an 11-to-4 vote.

Agreement was made for absent members of the 27-member committee to cast votes today but it is not anticipated a full vote will change the results.

The measure, however, has yet to overcome the hurdle of stiff opposition within the Senate Banking Committee, which has scheduled a session for Thursday. The Senate group has heard the governors of the Federal Reserve Board express opposition to some provisions of the bill.

The bill as reported out by the House group would set up a 2 billion dollar Government corporation to finance construction of "middle-income" homes by cooperatives. Included in the measure is a provision for extending and increasing FHA's loan authority, which expires March 1.

The House Committee vote, which had been anticipated, was an initial victory for the Administration but a stiff floor fight in the House is expected as well as the battle on the Senate side. Representative Albert Rains (D., Ala.), a member of the Banking Committee, told reporters he is doubtful the House will approve the measure in its present form.

Rains leveled the same criticism of the bill as has been leveled in other quarters—the disparity of interest rates between loans for cooperative purposes and those for veterans and others under FHA. The cooperative housing section would give a 3 percent interest rate on loans, although veterans now pay 4 percent interest, and FHA insured loans are at 4½ percent.

The legislation would create a "National Mortgage Corporation for Housing Cooperatives."

The cooperatives would be organized locally by interested groups, and the Government corporation would make long-term loans out of an initial 100 million dollars in capital stock. The corporation would then be authorized to sell publicly debentures amounting to 300 million dollars after July 1, 1950, and the President would increase this amount by $1,700,000,000 after July 1, 1951. The Government would guarantee the debentures.

Participants in a cooperative would have to raise 10 percent of the cost of the housing project before becoming eligible for a loan. The cooperatives could be either single homes in a group or apartments.

Flustered Father Delivers New-Born Babe With Crash

Beloit, Wis., Feb. 21 (U.P.).—A father became so flustered when his wife gave birth to a girl in the back seat of their car today that he tried to drive through the door of the hospital emergency ward.

The baby was born while Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Edwards were speeding to the hospital from their farm.

Edwards was so nervous he failed to apply the brakes and the car crashed through the hospital doors and came to a stop in the emergency ward.

Mother, father and baby were reported "doing fine," but the hospital entrance was a shambles.

Builders Asked to Supply Pent-up Demand

By Conrad P. Harness
Post Reporter

Chicago, Feb. 21.—The Government's top housing man, FHA Administrator Raymond M. Foley, today praised the building industry for its record-breaking figure of 1,020,000 homes and apartments started last year. Then he proceeded to give the Nation's builders a verbal spanking.

Speaking before 6000 of them at the annual convention of the National Association of Home Builders, he warned the industry it must produce many more homes to satisfy the pent-up demand.

More homes must be built to sell in the lower and middle price brackets, he added, and lower prices must be achieved by cutting costs and profits, not by reducing the size of the house or its facilities.

Other needs emphasized by Foley included:

More rental housing at much lower rents. "And I mean family-sized units, not cramped efficiency units."

More private investment funds satisfied with a low interest rate.

A revised view of necessary profit percentages.

New legislative proposals now under congressional study, including the cooperative housing bill.

More moderate-priced houses for larger families.

Larger-sized homes selling for under $8000.

More sale and rental housing for Negroes.

Further development of prefabrication methods.

Most of these problems can be solved by finding ways to reduce building costs, he said.

When questioned as to whether the cooperative housing bill was a step toward socialism, Foley said that it was not. "Neither is it anti-private enterprise," he added.

Another speaker James C. Downs, jr., nationally known business economist, advised builders to strengthen their operations against a "sharp over-all drop in the private building market" expected late in 1950. Builders who do as well in 1950 as in the past must build to satisfy the lower income groups, he warned.

He pointed out that the number of houses which can be absorbed by the market is dependent upon the cash down payment required and the level of monthly installments.

Citing the influence of financing conditions, he pointed out that a decline of one half of one percent in the interest rate, and an increase of five years in the amortization term, gave each potential buyer 25 percent more purchasing power in mid-1949 than he had a year earlier. This was one reason for the record construction year.

House Approves $88,570,000 Aid To Hopis, Navajos

The House yesterday approved the $88,570,000 Navajo-Hopi Indian aid bill.

The measure, a revision of earlier legislation vetoed by President Truman, passed the Senate last year.

In its present form, the bill is minus a provision to which the President objected. This would have placed the Indians under jurisdiction of State laws in New Mexico, Arizona and Utah.

Because of minor amendments, the bill must go back to the Senate for agreement, or to a conference committee.

The bill now provides that the Federal Government bear about 80 percent of the burden in paying social security benefits to reservation Hopis and Navajos.

Eight of Family Burned to Death In Predawn Blaze

Addison, Mich., Feb. 21 (U.P.).—A farmer and seven of his nine children were burned to death today in a pre-dawn fire which destroyed their frame house.

Only survivor was the mother, Mrs. Dorothy Beagle, 44, who jumped from a second-floor window and ran for help. Her husband, Gerald, 44, died with the children.

The two surviving children did not live with their parents.

Dead besides the father were Geraldine, 14; Barbara, 12; Eloise, 10; Norma, 9; Paul, 6; William, 5, and Linda, 2.

Mrs. Beagle suffered second degree burns and cuts and bruises but hospital officials said she would recover.

Plan to Annex Fairfax Hit In Debate

Falls Church's plaps to annex 11 square miles of adjacent Fairfax County land were the subject of warm debate last night at the city's Madison school.

The debate, sponsored by the Falls Church Echo and Radio Station WFAX, centered on city council's latest proposal for annexation adopted Monday night. The council is seeking a slightly smaller area than that asked in an earlier annexation ordinance adopted last spring.

Predicts Tax Rise

Assistant Fairfax Commonwealth attorney, Lytton Gibson, told the more than 100 persons present that "there is no question" but that city taxes will rise in event of annexation.

"Everything they are annexing, with the exception of Ravenwood, Malbrook, and Sleepy Hollow (subdivisions) is a tax liability," Gibson contended.

"I have never heard one single Fairfax County official say he didn't want to lose that territory Falls Church wants to annex," Gibson added. He said the heavily populated subdivisions would cost the city more in schools and other services than they would bring in in real and personal property taxes.

Says Tax Values High

Speaking for the annexation proposal, David O. Walter, a member of the city charter commission and a resident of the annexable area, said tax values in the adjoining Fairfax land were high and that the county took in from two to three times as much money as it spent in improvements in the annexation area.

Another annexation advocate, Falls Church school board member John R. Miles, said the city has spent a grand total of about $40,000 this year on its schools "that I'm sure the county wouldn't have spent." Falls church was a part of the Fairfax system until last year.

Miles said "we can give you a modern school ysstem for the same amount of money or less than you are paying the county in taxes."

Jury Indicts Arlington Man In Rape Case

An Arlington grand jury yesterday indicated a 35-year-old Arlington man on charges of raping two 14-year-old wards placed in his care by the District Welfare Department.

Charged with three counts of rape against the two teen-agers was Jackson Walter Ager of 1932 South Langley st., Arlington. According to a complaint sworn out by Mrs. Willard Bond, District welfare worker, the acts took place between December 26 and January 4.

Seven other persons were indicted by the grand jury on the following charges: William D. Goodman, stealing a total of $1500 from John Velebir, Arlington-Tucker Sales Inc., and General Credit, Inc.; Rebecca Powell, 806 South Scott st., felonious assault; Ardell R. Nicholson, 1925 Eye st. nw., breaking and entering.

Also William A. Coughlin, of Baltimore, grand larceny; Eugene J. Coles, 4820 Lee hghy., breaking and entering; Charles Williams, 433 S. Columbus st., Alexandria, breaking and entering and possessing burglar tools, and John R. Polk, 836 N. Wakefield st., Arlington, possessing stolen property.

Correction

A story in The Washington Post yesterday reported the arrest of Roland Webber on narcotics and larceny charges and because of a typographical error mistakenly listed his address as 2909 Porter st. nw., instead of 2902 Porter st. nw. The Washington Post regrets the error.

ITALIAN KILLS WIFE, STABS SELF—Clemente Arena, 56-year-old Italian, who returned only Monday from Italy, sits in the hallway of his New York apartment with a dagger's blade in his stomach. According to police, the man stabbed himself 25 times after wounding his wife twice with a pistol and then killing her with a long dagger in her heart—the same dagger he used on himself. Mrs. Arena was the mother of eight children. The stabbing climaxed a pre-breakfast argument, police said. Arena was taken to a hospital in a serious condition. School Holds Brotherhood Program

Youngsters from the upper grades stood on the stage of the auditorium and sang the "Marseillaise" at the top of their voices.

They were celebrating "Brotherhood Week" and had just been told by their principal, Mrs. Roberta Barnes, that the world was like a big family.

She said they should love all the people in the world just as they loved a mother, father, sister or brother.

The youngsters, though they listened to what she said, indicated a special affinity with the French.

Several of the students wore French costumes. The walls of the auditorium were decorated with their paintings of French children. Then, too, they knew something of the French language. As students of Truesdell, the laboratory training school for Wilson Teachers College, they receive twice weekly French lessons.

A group of the student teachers from Wilson were on hand to sing a group of French fables, presenting them with exaggerated gestures to the delight of the children.

Mrs. Beatrice Zuckerman of the Parent-Teacher Association presented the school a pottery plate from the Quimper section of France. The plate came over in the French Merci Train.

2 Area Bills Advance in Md. House

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21.—Two pieces of Washington area legislation advanced a step further in the Maryland House of Delegates here today.

A Prince Georges bill passed the House and went to the Senate. A Montgomery County bill was reported favorably out of committee and ordered printed for third reading.

The Prince Georges bill would repeal an act of the 1949 Legislature authorizing the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to fix water charges sufficient to cover interest charges on water, sewer and drainage bond issues.

The Montgomery County bill would give counties powers of condemnation similar to those of the State Highway Commission for highway purposes.

After today's session, members of both Washington area delegations met with three members of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to discuss bills affecting that agency. An amendment clarifying the proposal to put water and sewer connections under the purview of the WSSC specifies that plumbers may perform such work when acting as WSSC agents or contracts.

Retirement Fund Favored For Teachers

The Arlington County School Board last night threw its support behind the proposed improvement in the State retirement fund for teachers.

Board members voted to tell the Arlington delegation to the State Assembly they favored a bill which would increase maximum retirement benefits from $1000 to $2500 a year.

The Board also made fianal arrangements to transfer funds to complete purchase of land for the new Hume school at 24th and S. Ode sts. Board chairman Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell said it was hoped contracts would be let for the job March 16.

The board also announced that the county had received title to two buses, once leased to the Capital Transit, from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation without cost for use as school buses. The board has had only one school bus.

On March 11, it was announced, the citizen advisory committees will be taken on a tour of Arlington County schools in the buses, starting at 9:30 a. m., from Washington and Lee High School, where the board met last night.

Admiral Hanlon Heads Laboratory At White Oak

Rear Admiral Byron H. Hanlon, Honolulu, commander of the Atlantic Fleet mine force, was reassigned yesterday as commander of the White Oak, Md., naval ordnance laboratory.

Rear Admiral John P. Womble, jr., Atlanta, Ga., until recently deputy director for intelligence for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, will succeed Hanlon as commander of the Atlantic mine force.

Rear Admiral Frank E. Beatty, Belevedere, Calif., commander of the White Oak laboratory, will become commander of the Mare Island, Calif., naval base. Rear Admiral Frank J. Lowry, East Cresco, Iowa, present base commander, will retire, March 1.

Alexandria Council Urges Lake Purchase

Alexandria City Council yesterday urged that the State of Virginia purchase the Alexandria Water Co.'s 114-acre Lake Barcroft and the 566 wooded acres around it for use as a State park.

The council passed a resolution asking State Senator Andrew W. Clarke and Delegate Armistead L. Boothe to push purchase of the property—located in Fairfax County near Baileys Crossroads—by the State. The property was put on the block February 8.

License Fee Boost Weighed by District

A survey of all District businesses and professions to determine whether license fees should be increased was ordered yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Walter L. Fowler, budget officer, who recommended the action, pointed out that the last such survey was based on expense as of July, 1946. Since then, District pay boosts have increased the cost of license inspections, Fowler said, but fees have remained the same. The survey will be conducted by the District License Committee.

Official Ruling On Cash Bonds Asked by Bowie

State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie said yesterday he has asked Hall Hammond, Maryland's attorney general, for an official ruling on posting of cash bond.

This was an aftermath to the arrest of Representative Fred L. Crawford (R., Mich.), who spent two nights in the county jail and insisted on his right to post a cash bond.

Bowie said he had asked an opinion of Hammond because there is a serious question in his mind whether a 1949 act of the Legislature actually gives committing magistrates in Prince Georges County the authority to accept personal recognizance upon the posting of cash or other security.

Hearing Set On Adoption Of Boy, 4

The custody fight revolving around 4-year-old David Gregory Hudson moved a step nearer solution in District Court yesterday.

Federal Judge Matthew F. McGuire dismissed habeas corpus proceedings and cleared the way for a hearing of an adoption petition filed by Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Little, 1315 10th st. nw. No date was set for the hearing.

Opposing the Littles' efforts to regain custody of the child was the District Board of Public Welfare, which feels it can provide a better home.

Judge McGuire said he would name a member of the bar to conduct an independent investigation. Meanwhile, he ruled the child must remain in the custody of the board with the Littles having visiting privileges.

The youngster is the son of Mrs. Mary Hudson, 5030 Branch ave. se. who had signed an agreement to let the Littles care for the child. Later she indicated she preferred the Welfare Board to hav him.

The child was placed with the board but shortly afterward Little took the child back to his home. The habeas corpus proceedings stemmed from that move.

Koones Chosen As Head of 1950 Cancer Crusade

Charles C. Koones, Washington realtor, will serve as chairman of the 1950 Cancer Crusade here, it was announced last night.

Koones

District goal in the April fund-raising campaign is $200,000 of the national goal of $14,565,000.

Koones said he accepted the chairmanship largely because of "personal interest, because the dreadful disease has taken its toll of my personal friends and I am anxious to offer what services I can to their memory."

Ducks Freeze to Water

Coal Contract Talks Again Draw a Blank

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

There was no good news on the coal front last night.

John L. Lewis and the coal operators continue for another day their court-mandated negotiations for a new contract, but at the end of the day, the comment was the same as in the past 10 days: "No progress." The negotiators agreed to meet again at 11 a. m. today at the Statler.

Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, dropped in on the meeting late in the day and could offer no word of cheer. He said he was keeping the White House informed on the situation.

There was more talk of Government seizure of the mines but no indication of such a move at the White House or among Administration leaders on Capitol Hill. Seizure would require legislation, and might, or might not, prove to be more effective than the court injunction ordering an end to the strike.

The strike ban was issued last week, but thus far there has been no move by the 370,000 striking miners to comply. As a result, the United Mine Workers Union faces a heavy fine unless the miners purge themselves of contempt of court by Friday.

New violence was reported in the coal fields. Two thousand pickets set fire to a mine tipple, overturned a dozen cars of nonunion workers, and caused $15,000 damage at the Carrier Coal Co. mine, Conifer, Pa. Thirty police cleared way through the pickets so a fire truck could get through to the tipple.

Five coal trucks were overturned by 200 roving pickets at a nonunion strip mine in Center, Pa. Rifle bullets were reported fired into three trucks at a nonunion mine in Emery County, Utah. Warrants were issued for 75 West Virginia pickets, including a woman, on the charge of stabbing trussed-up nonunion workers with a hat pin.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said he was informed by a delegation that "organized gangs" are keeping the miners from working in Ohio. He said it seemed like a "clear case of contempt." He referred his callers to the Justice Department.

Layoffs in industry for lack of coal gained momentum. Southern Railway announced the layoff of 1000 more workers, for a total of 3000. Baltimore & Ohio, which already has furloughed 9000 employes, said it would lay off 10 percent of its clerical force Friday, and 1386 shop men next week. Norfolk & Western added 70 more layoffs for a total of 5400.

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. said it had acquired enough coal to put off for 24 hours the scheduled closing last night of its huge plants at Pittsburgh and Aliquippa, Pa., thereby giving 23,000 workers a reprieve. Bethlehem Steel announced 1000 of its employes at Sparrows Point, Md., probably would be sent home in the next few days.

Other coal developments yesterday:

Governor Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, asked the Legislature for power to seize private coal stocks and to impose price controls on coal.

A delegation from Binghamton, Johnson City and Endicott, N. Y., brought a petition with 17,000 names here urging the President to order the striking miners back to work. The delegation said the three communities face an almost complete industrial shutdown for lack of coal.

St. Louis ordered its schools shut until Monday. Rockford, Ill., sent out crews to chop trees for fuel.

The United Mine Workers St. Michaels local, near Johnstown, Pa., worked all day to dig emergency fuel for homes, schools and hospitals.

Night Schools Closed to Conserve Soft Coal

uses one third of the coal received in FSS yards, this indicated 7000 tons are available to District institutions.

Roland M. Brennan, District Purchasing Officer and fuel coordinator, said 6000 tons could keep all District institutions going about four weeks under present conservation efforts.

However, if it is found necessary to ration District agencies, Brennan said he has prepared for the Commissioners a list of coal-using buildings in the following order of priority: (1) Glenn Dale Sanatorium and Health Department clinics; (2) District Training School at Laurel, Md.; (3) Lorton Reformatory and Occoquan Workhouse; (4) Industrial Home School and National Training School for Girls; (5) District Building; (6) Miscellaneous Engineer Department shops, Ford Building and Force School, which contains rent control and public health engineering offices; (7) public schools; (8) libraries.

If rationing becomes necessary, Brennan said buildings where persons live would be supplied first. The others would get what was left.

District agencies not included in the list of priorities are heated by oil or hard coal, Brennan said.

Corning said civic groups and the Recreation Department may use the 150 coal-using school buildings for night events—but they can't have any coal.

Milo F. Christensen, Recreation Department superintendent, said said his department had been using schools on this basis for the past week. It has worked out all right, he said.

Meanwhile, J. Thomas Kennedy's committee which is passing on all requests from low-priority commercial institutions for coal reported not very much business yesterday. Kennedy, who is District superintendent of Weights, Measures and Markets, said a request from one church (next to lowest priority) for coal was turned down because the building was heated to 79 degres.

House Gives Ovation To Jap Lawmakers

Members of the Japanese Parliament were given a standing ovation by the House yesterday when they appeared in the gallery during a tour of the Capitol.

Representative George P. Miller (D., Calif.) praised the Japanese as hard-working people who have "changed their ways" and now seek democracy. Members then rose and applauded the visitors.

Agency Funds Help Finance Of U. S. Deficit

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday the Government is financing a sizable part of its budget deficit by borrowing from its own agencies, notably the Social Security funds.

Government IOUs to various of its agencies have been increasing at the rate of two billion dollars to four billion dollars a year recently, the board said in its "Bulletin" for February.

They already total more than 38 billion dollars, and will mount to 42 billion dollars by mid-1951—compared with some 222 billion dollars that the public will hold by that time, it added.

The agencies get the IOUs by lending the Government—usually at interest rates of from 2 to 4 percent—funds they collect for such things as old-age or unemployment insurance.

Other sources include, postal savings deposits, veterans insurance funds, and Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. funds.

Since the Government is spending considerably more than it takes in from taxes, customs duties, etc., it would have to cover all the deficit by public borrownig if its own agencies didn't supply the money.

The Reserve Board noted that although the President has forecast a budget deficit of $5,100,000,000 for the fiscal year beginning next July 1, it could make out with $2,700,000,000 in borrowing from the public. Trust funds and agencies could supply the rest.

The board noted that the inflationary effects of the Government's public borrowings will depend on the extent to which it borrows from banks rather than private individuals or corporations.

"When economic activity is high and rising and the demand for bank credit is active, it is appropriate to lay stress on the desirability of avoiding a deficit and of financing any deficit that may develop as much as possible outside the banking system," the board said.

ECA's Task Is Called 'Doubly Acute' Now lands, as a political "conciliator" for the Marshall Plan organization.

"In a sense it is not a bad record," said Hoffman, "but it is not good enough." He added:

"I am convinced that before the Marshall Plan is completed two years hence our friends in western Europe, with our help, will take those major steps toward the creation of a single market in Europe which they have accepted as a prime objective and which has the full support of the United States Government."

With a note of triumph in his voice, Hoffman told the committees he had managed to save 150 million dollars out of this year's appropriation, and asked that it be carried over into the new fiscal year.

He ended with a plea to finish the task started in 1948 and to remember "the titanic struggle which the free nations, under American leadership, are waging against the dangerous forces of Soviet communism."

Secretary Acheson hammered hard at the cold war theme when he replaced Hoffman at the witness table. His words were sharp but his manner was listless and preoccupied as he read his prepared statement, contrasting the Soviet and non-Soviet ideas of foreign relations.

The Soviet concept is "that no state is friendly which is not subservient," he said; the other concept is based on respect for the rights of others and on the peaceful settlement of disputes.

"The Kremlin has had important successes, though they fall far short of its ambitions, and it now inescapably confronts the nations of the free world which cannot accept its definition of internationalism, and which are by that fact a threat, in the Kremlin's view, to its security," he went on.

"The Kremlin can and is pursuing its course with efficiency and with signs of increasing boldness, using whatever means seem appropriate to it in a given situation. The question before us is how can the threat be met, how is the Kremlin's design to be frustrated."

The answer, he said, is "to make our system work successfully and prove itself by the practical test of its worth." The response of the free world had to be both defensive and constructive—the first, to deter an attack or to defeat an attack if it should come; the second, to build a successfully functioning system.

With this preface behind him, Acheson agreed with Hoffman in favoring closer economic "association" among the European nations, with the continuing "association and support" of the United States. But he frowned on the idea of European political federation, saying "neither the people nor their governments appear ready for this step."

"We recognize their right to decide democratically, as our founding fathers did, when, how and whether they will federate," he said. "We reserve the same right for ourselves, as we approach on a step-by-step basis to a closer association with other nations, through the United Nations, the North Atlantic Treaty and other arrangements."

Whereas Hoffman had emphasized the end of the Marshall Plan in 1952, Acheson said economic collaboration with Europe "must continue to be a basic element of our national policy."

"It is in the carrying out of such a policy, in our determination and our will to do it however long it takes and whatever it requires of us," he declared, "that the frustration of the Kremlin's design for world dominion lies."

In the afternoon Acheson underwent two hours of questioning by the House committee, and stressed that some American aid would have to continue after 1952.

"I don't think all American aid will end for the world, and certainly not for some parts of Europe, in 1952," he told Representative A. A. Ribicoff (D., Conn.).

On the Senate side only five members of the Foreign Relations Committee turned up for questioning Hoffman.

Answering Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), Hoffman said it would "play directly into the Kremlin's hands" for Congress to compel ECA to use some of its money for American surpluses.

NEW AID FOR EUROPE ASKED—Paul G. Hoffman, head of the Economic Cooperation Administration, outlines a new spending plan for Europe yesterday to a joint session of the Senate Foreign Relations and House Foreign Affairs Committees. The microphone (extreme right) is for a transcription made by the State Department for the Voice of America foreign broadcasts. Hoffman said $3,100,000,000 would be needed to pay for European recovery in the 12 months beginning July 1

Truman Urged to Reconsider Plan to End Electoral College

President Truman was urged yesterday by one of his congressional leaders to take another look at a proposed constitutional amendment to abolish the electoral college.

Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.) of the House Rules Committee told reporters he has written the President to point out that the proposal might give the South "much greater power than it now possesses."

A resolution embodying the proposed amendment has been passed by the Senate and now is in the House Rules Committee.

It would abolish the electoral plan of choosing the President and Vice President and give each candidate for those offices an electoral vote in each State in proportion to the popular vote cast for the candidate. The constitution now gives the entire electoral vote of a State to the candidate receiving the largest popular vote.

"I have heard it expressed," he wrote the President, "that in a close election, it would give the South a tremendous advantage and perhaps make possible its wielding the balance of power. I am commencing to feel . . . that it would give the South much greater power than it now possesses."

Sabath concluded with the observation that, "I fear that the legislation is not for the best interest of the Democratic Party and the country.

The proposal must get a two thirds vote in the House before it can be submitted to the States. Thirty-six States must ratify it before it would become effective.

Story of Intrigue, Delay of 'Certain Death' Of Bulgarian Employe Revealed by State Dept.

By The Associated Press

The State Department told a chilling story of intrigue in Bulgaria yesterday, woven around American Legation maneuvers which for months staved off "certain death" at the hands of Communist secret police for a Bulgarian staff employe.

The occasion for release of the long-secret story was its tragic ending—the effort to keep Translator Michael Shipkov, 39, out of Red hands finally failed. The Bulgarian regime announced his indictment.

The story really begins with another Bulgarian translator in the Sofia Legation, Ivan Secoulov. He died in a Communist jail three days after his arrest last August. He was one of three Bulgarian staff members who, the department said, had been tortured and killed by the Communist militia and secret police.

Made Personal Appeal

In view of what happened to Secoulov, United States Minister Heath "had good reason to fear that the same fate would befall" Shipkov.

"At the latter's request, therefore, he (Heath) made a personal appeal to the Foreign Office to grant exit visas to Shipkov and his family, consisting of his wife and child.

"The request was based on the fact that the Foreign Office had been unable to prevent the militia from persecuting and killing local employes of the legation.

"The Foreign Office was informed that compliance with the request would be interpreted by the United States Government as concrete evidence of the Bulgarian government's sincere desire to restore some degree of comity to United States-Bulgarian relations."

But on August 20, the department related, Shipkov was arrested, questioned without let-up for 32 hours, and "tortured into making false confessions of having committed imaginary acts of sabotage and espionage against the Bulgarian government, implicating his personal friends and officials of the American and British Legations."

The translator finally was released upon his signed agreement to return to the legation and act as a spy-informer, the department said.

Told Legation the Truth

But he had "the strength of character and courage to overcome his personal fear" and tell the legation the truth in a sworn statement, it went on, adding:

"In the light of the brutal conduct of the militia, and of the courage and devotion to his ideals shown by Shipkov, it would have been a betrayal of all principles of humanity to have turned him out of the chancery straight into the hands of the secret police and certain death."

Accordingly, Shipkov was permitted to stay in the legation. Health renewed pleas for an exit visa, telling the man's story, and the foreign office expressed deep regret. Foreign Minister Vladimir Poptomov was quoted as stating on October 11 that the maltreatment was against the policy of the government, indicating that those responsible would be punished.

Wanted For Investigation

But on January 12 there was a note from the foreign office saying Shipkov was wanted for investigation in connection with "acts of a nature hostile to the state" and that authorities had determined that the legation "had aided Shipkov to hide."

Despite that formal notice, the legation decided that "in common humanity" and in view of the Bulgarian record of "ruthlessness and injustice" it could not release Shipkov to almost certain death on false charges. So he was allowed to remain in the legation until "recently when at his own request and in view of the probability of the imminent withdrawal of United States diplomatic representing from Bulgaria, he left the legation to seek a more permanent refuge."

The department concluded its account:

"Mr. Shipkov's seizure by the Bulgarian militia constitutes still another in the long chain of tragedies which have overwhelmed decent, freedom-loving Bulgarians."

ternational Standard Electric Co., I. T. & T. Hungarian subsidiary, death.

Zoltan Rado, 42, section chief of the Ministry of Foreign Trade, death.

Father Istvan Justh, 53, Roman Catholic priest, 10 years.

Keleman Domokos, 51, factory director, 10 years.

Baroness Edina Doery, 36, bar hostess, five years.

The court also ordered that all of Vogelers and Sanders' assets in Hungary be confiscated and that they be expelled upon termination of their prison sentences. The Hungarians lost all their political rights and property.

Judge Olthy explained that the American's and Briton's sentences were not as harsh as they could have been under Hungary's espionage and sabotage law because the two men bore no personal "grudge against the people of this country."

During the court proceedings Vogeler and Sanders confessed to using their positions to cover up subversive activities and to sending regular intelligence reports to Washington, New York and London.

(In New York W. R. Vogeler, father of the defendant, said, "No one in his right mind can believe my son is guilty. He must have been tortured for months . . . Why, they even had to give him a paper to read from."

Trial of Vogeler Denounced by U. S.

By The Associated Press

The United States yesterday denounced the trial Hungary gave Robert A. Vogeler on spy charges, calling it "devoid of justice, inadequate as to evidence, and replete with falsehoods."

In blunt language, the State Department said Vogeler's trial "marked the extension of political persecution and acts of injustice to citizens of foreign nationality."

"Such falsehoods and inequities can and will be exposed in due course," the department declared.

Vogeler's so-called confession and his subsequent testimony it said, "was clearly not that of a man free to speak in his own defense."

that time to break off diplomatic relations unless the demand was withdrawn.

Heath's name had been mentioned repeatedly in the trial of Traicho Kostov, former vice premier who was executed in December for treason. Prosecution witnesses declared Heath was implicated in plotting against the security of the Communist state.

The newspapers told of the indictments under this heading:

"The legation of the United States in Sofia—center of plots and espionage against the people's republic of Bulgaria."

The five Bulgarians were charged with transmitting political, economic and military information to the American intelligence service.

Heading the list are Shipkov, former legation interpreter, and Jivka Rindova, 32, former telephone operator at the legation.

The indictment said Shipkov testified in a pretrial confession, that Heath "every day and at every separate occasion" sowed among the employes of the legation the idea that the present Communist-led government soon would be changed.

Other declarations by Shipkov, as stated in the indictment:

All American moves aimed at exerting pressure on Bulgaria were given wide publicity. Heath had told him that the question of human rights raised before the United Nations will be linked with an effort to impose American conceptions on Bulgaria.

the Hungarian reparations obligations, radio transmitters used by the USSR to jam the broadcasts of the Voice of America."

Last Non-Red Minister

Nyaradi, lecturing in this country and here as a political refugee, was the last non-Communist member of the Hungarian government.

He said today that he is convinced the Vogeler trial was simply a pretext to cover up the "climax" of a two-year program by Hungary to confiscate and nationalize all foreign-owned property in the country. He said it follows, in exact detail, the procedure adopted in 1948 when Sandard Oil Co. properties in Hungary were expropriated.

In March, 1948, Nyaradi explained a great part of Hungarian industry was nationalized. But on his representations foreign-owned property was exempted from the nationalization decree.

Six months later however the government arrested two Standard Oil employes and accused them of sabotage.

"Communist members of the government frankly and cynically admitted to me at that time" Nyaradi said "that this was simply a pretext to get hold of American industry."

Standard Oil Property Seized

Two months later they seized the oil property. At this point Nyaradi, on a mission outside of Hungary heard the news and resigned.

Similarly, the former minister said, a month after Vogeler's arrest, the president's council of Hungary voided all exemptions from nationalization of foreign-owned property, by a decree of December 26, 1949.

The idea that Vogoler conducted sabotage while in Hungary, is "ridiculous," Nyaradi said. "He couldn't evn breathe freely, much less do any sabotage, under the constant surveillance of special Communist supervisors in I. T. & T. plants."

Vogeler's "confession," Nyaradi concluded, must have been produced by a combination of "torture, drugs and intimidation. He said he doubted the American would ever emerge from Hungary, for if he did, he would be able to reveal the methods used to obtain such "confessions."

U. S. Breaks Off Relations With Bulgaria

almost impossible to get decent housing space, and Bulgarian employes of the legation had been made victims of a campaign of persecution.

The State Department said yesterday that three Bulgarians were tortured and probably killed simply because they went to work for the American Legation.

These were identified as Joseph Dimitrov, Dragan Peev and Ivan Secoulov.

Bulgaria is regarded as the most servile of Russia's satellites, and little hope was entertained here that it would back down on its demand for Minister Heath's recall or would make life any easier for Americans in Sofia.

The latest United States note, after saying the Bulgarian government was well aware that the charges against Heath were "wholly unfounded," went on to add:

"The conclusion is inescapable that the Bulgarian government is unwilling to modify the position that it has taken, that it is unwilling to treat American official representatives in Bulgaria in accordance with the standards of established international practice, and consequently, that it is unwilling to maintain normal diplomatic relations with the United States."

Relations between the United States and Bulgaria had not been friendly and cordial, the note said, since they were resumed in 1947.

Grievances of U. S.

"Cordiality was scarcely to be expected," it continued, "when Bulgarian officials and the controlled press were constantly denouncing and insulting the United States and when the Bulgarian government was violating its peace treaty obligations, ignoring resolutions of the United Nations and supporting armed action against Greece."

In conclusion, the note said:

"The Government of the United States will continue to maintain its feeling of friendship for the people of Bulgaria and to manifest in every appropriate way its deep interest in their welfare. The Government of the United States, however, is reluctantly compelled to conclude that it is no longer possible, in view of the present attitude of the Bulgarian Government, for the American Minister and his staff to remain in Bulgaria.

"They have received instructions to leave Bulgaria as soon as possible. At the same time the Government of the United States requests the recall of the Bulgarian diplomatic mission from the United States."

The action, judging by dispatches from abroad, came as no surprise to those attached to the legation in Sofia. They had done their packing, and were ready to start leaving by train on Friday.

The Bulgarian Charge d'Affaires said that he and his 12-member mission here would be ready to leave early in March.

Release On Bond

In retrospect, there is likely to be one healthy after-effect of Representative Fred Crawford's confinement in the Upper Marlboro jail. Whatever Mr. Crawford's own intentions in dramatizing the confusion surrounding his arrest, Maryland officials undoubtedly will be a good deal more scrupulous about the manner in which prisoners are informed of their bail rights. They also are likely to be more careful about informing local judicial officers about changes in the law. The Maryland Legislature, for example, acted in 1949 to permit prisoners to post cash bonds instead of real estate or surety bonds for their release. But if Mr. Crawford had not made an issue of the refusal of the Upper Marlboro justice of the peace to accept cash, it might have been years before word of the change trickled down to the local level.

The change in the Maryland law is meaningful as a way of protecting those defendants on minor offenses who are able to supply cash bonds on their own without resorting to the services of professional bondsmen. Such bondsmen often are a necessary help for persons who would languish in jail indefinitely without them, but there is no reason why anyone should be forced to patronize a bondsman if he has other means of satisfying bail requirements. There is no indication that the trouble at Upper Marlboro resulted from anything but ignorance on the part of the justice; on the other hand, bail-bond rackets elsewhere are not unknown, with bondsmen kicking back part of their fees to law officers. The case is timely for the impetus it gives to the investigation of shady practices by bondsmen in the District.

Unreasonable Searches

Two considerations weigh heavily against the decision of the Supreme Court in the Rabinowitz case on the perennial question of the limitations to search and seizure. First, the court overturned a decision made less than two years ago in a similar case. Second, it has enunciated a new rule that seems to us highly unsatisfactory from the viewpoint of protecting "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures."

In addition to partially reversing the Trupiano decision of 1948, the court left many other previous rulings in the status, as Justice Frankfurter expressed it in his dissenting opinion, of "derelicts on the stream of the law." Sometimes, of course, new conditions and new currents of judicial thinking make it necessary for the court to acknowledge previous error and adopt a new line of constitutional interpretation. But this is an indulgence that calls for great restraint lest flexibility give way to instability in the law. A government of laws is impossible unless the people, at least the bar and the lower courts, can know with some degree of certainty what the law is.

In this instance, moreover, the court appears to have abandoned a sound principle for a highly questionable one. The court had previously held in many cases that a warrant is necessary to a lawful search, except in cases where there is good excuse for not obtaining a warrant. Exceptions to the rule of obtaining a warrant have been made to protect the arresting officer against any suspect who might be carrying a concealed weapon. Likewise the court has not required a warrant for seizure of vehicles that could be rapidly moved or papers in the possession of the arrested person that might be destroyed. We think the minority—Justices Black and Jackson in addition to Justice Frankfurter—is on solid ground in demanding that exceptions to the rule of requiring a search warrant be strictly limited to such cases of necessity.

The court has now set up a quite different test. "The relevant test," said Justice Minton for the majority, "is not whether it is reasonable to procure a search warrant, but whether the search was reasonable." That sounds like an invitation to police officers to search the premises without a warrant whenever an arrest is made in the hope that the courts will somehow find it reasonable. In this instance the court said it was reasonable to search a one-room office of a stamp forger. Where is the line to be drawn? If one room may be searched without a warrant, may not two rooms be so searched? If two rooms, why not the entire house? Is there now any well-defined place to stop without wholesale invasion of the right to privacy? We fear that the court has done more than set a bad precedent. It seems to have swept away the only clear-cut criterion by which unreasonable searches and seizures can be separated from the cases in which necessity demands instantaneous searches for the protection of society.

Break With Bulgaria

The rupture of diplomatic relations with the sub-Soviet government of Bulgaria is a step almost without precedent in time of peace. It was necessary, however, that an end be made to the calculated series of insults and indignities to which the American Minister at Sofia, Mr. Heath, and all the members of his legation staff have been subjected. It would have been ruinous to American prestige in Europe, and woefully discouraging to the anti-Communist elements within the iron curtain, had these persecutions given rise to nothing more than futile protests.

Because of these outrages it was virtually impossible for Mr. Heath and his staff to exercise any real diplomatic function. They were not permitted to travel; it was made difficult for them to obtain housing accommodations and even meals. Bulgarian employes of the legation were terrorized, arrested, interrogated and sometimes tortured by the political police. And it was probably not Mr. Heath's diplomatic status so much as the possibility of reprisal against Bulgarian Communists now in the United States, that preserved him from the fate of Mr. Robert A. Vogeler, assistant vice president of the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp., who was sentenced yesterday by a Communist court at Budapest to 15 years imprisonment.

The truth is that the Communist behavior in international affairs has made diplomacy—as it has been conceived and conducted since the seventeenth century under the assumption of an international law—virtually obsolete. The treatment accorded diplomats in Communist territory is governed by expediency rather than by usage or convention. When M. Grzybowski, Polish Ambassador to Moscow, asked for his passports in September, 1939, after the Russo-German partition of his country, he was told: "You are no longer an Ambassador; you have no country and therefore no status, no rights. Your request is refused."

It may become necessary, as the result of the Vogeler and other incidents, to extend the breach one by one to all the satellite countries in the Balkans. It is appropriate, nevertheless, that the first break should be with Bulgaria, for it is there that the transition from the "popular front" form of government to a "people's republic" is most nearly complete. The most formidable obstacles to this transition, Nikola Petkov, leader of the once-powerful Peasant's Party, and Trachio Kostov, the leader of a powerful faction within the Bulgarian Communist Party imbued with Titoist ideas, have been removed by violence and their principal followers shot or imprisoned. The famous Comrade Dimitrov, died in Moscow under somewhat suspicious circumstances. The present dictator, Comrade Chervenkov, having outmaneuvered other possible rivals for power, is now established as a kind of lesser Stalin—subject only to the greater Stalin.

FDR On Wiretaps

A curious fiction has gained currency that the wire tapping in which the Federal Bureau of Investigation has engaged is somehow sanctified and made legal by an authorization said to have been given by the late President Roosevelt in 1941. Attorney General McGrath said some six weeks ago, when the FBI came in for vigorous criticism in connection with its wire-tapping activities in the Coplon case, that "there has been no new policy or procedure since the initial policy was stated by President Roosevelt." The latest resort to this justification is contained in a letter addressed to President Truman by Charles O. Blaisdell, president, Society of Former Special Agents of the FBI, Inc., which is reproduced in the Congressional Record.

> In recent weeks the FBI has been criticized for the use of wire taps in the conduct of espionage investigations. Many of these critics have left the erroneous impression with the general public that the FBI has been engaged in the unauthorized use of wire taps. That is not a fact. The Attorney General of the United States has very recently stated that the FBI uses wire taps in national defense and kidnaping cases and then only upon his authorization. This policy was approved by the late President Roosevelt in 1941 and has been followed consistently by the Attorneys General since that time.

Apart from the obvious consideration that no President may authorize what Congress has specifically forbidden by law, this amounts to a gross distortion of Mr. Roosevelt's plain intent. Mr. Roosevelt's expression of opinion—it was no more than that—was contained in a letter dated February 21, 1941, to Thomas H. Eliot, then a member of Congress, who had solicited his views on a bill introduced in the House to legalize wire tapping by an employe of any executive department having investigatory functions. The President replied:

> I have read the bill and I have no hesitation in saying that it goes entirely too far . . . The use of wire tapping to aid law-enforcement officers raises squarely the most delicate problem in the field of democratic statesmanship. It is more than desirable, it is necessary, that criminals be detected and prosecuted as vigilantly as possible. It is more necessary that the citizens of a democracy be protected in their rights of privacy from unwarranted snooping. As an instrument for oppression of free citizens, I can think of none worse than indiscriminate wire tapping . . .
> There is, however, one field in which, given the conditions in the world today, wire tapping is very much in the public interest . . . I have no compunction in saying that wiretapping should be used against those persons, not citizens of the United States, and those few citizens who are traitors to their country, who today are engaged in espionage or sabotage against the United States . . . There is only one domestic crime which ought possibly to be included; that is kidnaping.

There is no rational way to construe this letter as an indorsement of wire tapping in violation of the law. It is an indorsement only of a proposed amendment of the law. It conveys a clear recognition, moreover, that the law then in existence forbade wire tapping. Congress declined to adopt the proposed amendment. Wire tapping by FBI agents or by anyone else remains, then, as Judge Ryan called it in the Coplon case, illegal. And only Congress can legalize it.

Of Greatness

Washington is the greatest but scarcely the most characteristic of our national heroes. He is far less representative of the national genius than, say, Lincoln or even Jefferson. His figure remains for us across the distance of the years austere and even awesome, quite lacking in that geniality which is normally demanded of our heroes. He was not a man of extraordinary intellectual powers; in this respect there were several among his own contemporaries and compatriots who far excelled him. As a military commander, he is not to be counted among the great captains of history, and indeed, was far surpassed by another great American who had in all things taken Washington for his model. Certainly Washington was no great political philosopher, nor does he seem to have possessed extraordinary talent for practical statecraft.

Why, then, is the transcendent greatness of Washington recognized not only by Americans but by the world and by men of every political persuasion? It is because he had one quality often lacking in great men. The eighteenth century called it "virtue"; perhaps the nearest we can come to it in the vocabulary of our own times would be to say that he had invincible integrity. He was proof against the promptings of ambition, against the rancors of faction, against the subtle poisons of flattery. He affords the greatest historical example of an absolutely impersonal, unselfish devotion to country and to duty. Thus, he is the magnificent exception to Lord Acton's now-famous dictum that "great men are almost always bad men, even when they exercise influence and not authority, still more when you add the tendency or the certainty of corruption by authority."

Guests Of The Senate

The cordial reception accorded a delegation of visiting legislators from Japan by the United States Senate would be taken as a matter of course were it not for the very different reception these visitors received several weeks ago at the hands of the Boston City Council. In Boston, to which they had been sent by General MacArthur to observe the processes of American democracy, the doors of the council room were closed in their faces—because they were representatives of a country with which the United States had been at war. On Monday they were welcomed warmly in the United States Senate Chamber and heard Senator Tobey characterize the Boston council's action as "un-Christian and un-American."

Perhaps the visitors from Japan will have the insight and charity to recognize the affront they suffered in Boston as one of the imperfections of a society that strives to observe democratic principles but sometimes falls short of them. They must now know that the attitude they encountered in Boston is not the attitude of the American people. Indeed, the members of the Boston City Council must now know that what they did is generally regarded as shameful and silly. There is warmth and good will in America for a Japan that is presently to take its place in the fallible but aspiring fellowship of democratic peoples.

Palsied Children's Fund

Cerebral palsy had so long been considered a hopeless condition that the progress now being made in treating its victims demands special attention. Medical science has discovered that many of the children once thought to be feeble-minded because of this ailment can be restored to useful and sometimes normal living by proper therapy and training. There is still much to be learned about their condition and its causes, but enough is known to produce remarkable degrees of amelioration of their uncoordinated muscular movements, their speech defects, and their emotional instability.

In furtherance of this work the District's Society for Crippled Children is now conducting its annual drive for funds, with a special request for $1 contributions from a large number of citizens. These funds are devoted to maintenance of the society's diagnostic and consultation clinics, to the application of various forms of treatment, to training in speech control and muscle coordination, to a nursery school and kindergarten and counseling of parents of cerebral palsied children. It is a cause that should enlist the thoughtful and sympathetic interest of District residents. There are few opportunities for health dollars to be employed to better advantage.

WASHINGTON

The Dunkirks that he knew were long ago.
There were no flags, no famous fields to show,
But only harried thrusts, recurring flight—
The shores of Brooklyn fading in the night,
The banks by Trenton water boar with frost
The victories he won were battles lost.
But still they marched, and fought, and still together
Broke camp and slipped away, pliant as leather,
Lasting as steel, these troops who loved their land,
Held to their purpose by a general's hand.
The kin-foe now is kin. The building years
Move on. We share today the sweat and tears;
We share the strength that nothing can defeat
Who learned to win by learning to retreat.

Potatoes And Hunger

Twenty years ago the government of Brazil had huge quantities of coffee dumped in the Atlantic, and Canadian railroads used wheat for fuel. At the same time there was mass unemployment in all industrial countries, and millions lived miserably on the dole. More than any other single phase in the great depression, it was the deliberate destruction of available foodstuffs that shattered confidence in free enterprise and free society and, in Europe, drove the masses and intellectuals to fascism and communism.

We are now back to the 30s, with a vengeance. Here are our brave new potatoes rotting on the ground—and there are the miserable sharecroppers of Italy, the ruined middle classes of France and Germany, the underfed and starving populations of China, India, Southeast Asia, to say nothing of poverty in this country.

How are we to explain to the hungry why we are crushing what they crave? How in honesty and decency are we to justify such action to ourselves? As a means to support "price?" What a theme for Soviet propaganda! What a figleaf to cover up a bad conscience, weakening and demoralizing ourselves! No more effective action could be devised to undo the moral gains of the Marshall Plan, to drown out the Voice of America, to discredit in advance Point Four, and to stultify security policies.

The apparent inability to use available resources is one of the most serious charges brought by Socialists against free enterprise. Whatever may be done to meet the charge in the future—here is an emergency. An excess harvest of potatoes is at hand. In the enlightened self-interest of free society, and for the sake of our own souls if not for plain human decency, it must not be destroyed. In some form or other, processed or not, the good fruit of the earth must be conveyed to the neediest, in this country or abroad. If there is a hitch in legislation now on the statute books; if last year's Agriculture Act does not extend subsidies to cover shipping costs, let's demand it, immediately.

Truman And The Press

It seems to me Mr. Truman erred in his statement that he is a "free agent"—I think, rather, that he is an "agent" of the American people, not all of whom read the estimable New York Times. Quite a number of them, at "whistle stops," have perhaps a weekly newspaper, and a politically inspired trip on preelection occasions, to form their opinions.

Reporters generally, I have found, stick to facts, and perform the very useful service of reporting the news as it comes. News commentators, in most cases, are objective in their viewpoints and provide analytical food for thought regardless of the political views of the papers for which they write.

Under the circumstances, anything, however unimportant it may be considered by Mr. Truman or the bureaucratic hierarchy that might add to the thinking of the intelligent people of this country, is a service which I believe the press is striving to perform.

"Defense By Confusion"

Your February 9 editorial, "Defense By Confusion," together with the letter signed by Anne Scott, prompts me to add the following observation on "defenseless" Washington. So far as I am aware, no steps have been taken to insure adequate reserve electric power for important governmental buildings. It is well known that a principal target in air raids is the electric generating stations, since by crippling them the entire life of a city is disrupted.

In this country today are hundreds of idle diesel electric generating sets which the termination of the war made surplus. This equipment can be bought cheap from machinery dealers and others in practically all large cities. They exist in all sizes and can be placed in operation without any delay for rehabilitation.

It certainly appears odd that no attempt has been made to install some of this equipment, at least in the more important buildings where a disruption of the present electrical supply would cause untold confusion and delay in carrying on essential functions. Such installations can now be made far below the cost of new equipment, and the added security effected thereby would pay many times over in case of trouble.

Curtailed Navy

For once, Drew Pearson seems to have defeated his own purpose, unless that purpose is to "needle" the Navy rather than to vindicate Secretary Matthews, in his February 12 report of what transpired in the "closed-door" session of the Armed Services Committee with the Secretary. He gives the impression that Matthews (who at one time questioned the legality of Denfeld's reappointment) now states that the reappointment was made only because the Secretary was irked by the report that President Truman had promised the position to Admiral Blandy at the expiration of Admiral Denfeld's first term. Surely a Chief of Naval Operations should be appointed because of his capabilities rather than because of a secretarial fit of pique!

If 10 members of the Armed Services Committee wish to know whether or not naval officers will, in the future, feel free to testify as to their honest opinion on controversial defense matters, it would seem more appropriate to question these officers rather than Secretary Matthews.

It is becoming increasingly evident that the armed forces in general and the Navy in particular, not constituting a large, organized voting body, have become the props for a presidential economy plank that's being offered to offset general concern over a ruinous spending program.

Time To End Rent Controls

I am a renter and own no rental properties, and yet find my views on the continuance of rent controls different from those expressed by either the Rennies or Tighe Woods (Communication published February 17). (Column published February 12).

Mr. Woods seems to see no reason why, since new rental housing is decontrolled, rent controls continue to discourage construction for rent. That seems to me obvious for two reasons:

First, the continuance of rent controls on old buildings serves as a continuous reminder to enterprisers considering new rental construction of what may happen to their projects in the future. The experience in France and England is the horrible example.

Second, the continuance of rent controls on old buildings fixes public notions of the "fair" and "reasonable" rental and lowers the price of the competition which the new rental dwelling must meet. People judge rents in terms of the majority of units, that is those under rent control, and rent on newly constructed units, so judged, seem exorbitant. The owner of new rental construction built at costs between one and a half and two times those of the older construction must charge more and yet face the competition of those older units. The removal of controls would raise the rents on older buildings and gradually create in the public mind notions of "fair" and "reasonable" rents more in line with current costs.

The net effect of controls upon me as a renter is that I have fewer rental units to choose from. Projects which might have been built without controls are not being built. In fact the Bureau of Census found that between 1940 and 1945 despite an increase in the total number of dwelling units in the country, the number of rental units declined by 930,000. And Mr. Woods' figures show that since 1947 a much smaller proportion of the new construction was for rent than in 1925 and 1926.

The basic problem is how and when to get rid of rent controls. Mr. Woods and his local administrator seem to be waiting for the millennium, when there will be all the rental housing that anyone wants at 1940 prices. Each reader should think about his own occupation or business and consider how likely a return to the 1940 price level is in it. The chances are probably no greater in rental housing.

To me the real justification for rent control is the protection of families who, if they had to pay uncontrolled rents, would be obliged to live in dangerous dwellings or would not be able to feed or clothe themselves properly. There are many such families and they represent a serious problem that advocates of rent control elimination do not face. I confess that I don't know what to do about them. But substantial steps can be taken toward eliminating rent controls without solving the problem of those who might become public charges if controls are removed.

It would be impractical to base the continuation of controls upon an examination of the circumstances of each individual tenant. But it would be perfectly practical to discontinue controls on all rental units in price ranges where alternative decent units are available. Your February 19 issue contains advertisements for new apartments in about the $75 range, and the real estate section discusses new home developments costing under $10,000 or perhaps $70 a month. Tenants in controlled dwellings renting for that price or more have a choice, if their units are decontrolled, of paying the higher rent or of moving to one of these new units.

If we are compelled to sell our automobiles or give up our vacations in order either to pay the higher rent or to make a down payment on a new house, I would feel that the sacrifice is not so great that the Government should intervene for us. And if we feel that thereby the landlords become profiteers and make a "killing," then I would strike at all profiteers—the landlords, the automobile dealers, the big farmers, and the rest who have had free prices since 1946—through some nondiscriminatory means like the income tax.

Idle Food, Unfed People

By Malvina Lindsay

Senseless Dilemma

"THIS FOOD surplus business doesn't make any more sense than the bomb marathon," you remark to the man who knows all the ins and outs of things.

"Well, it's a pretty complex question. There's no simple answer."

Then why aren't we trying harder to find some complex answers before all the food in our storehouses rots? Why aren't we getting more milk and eggs to all those hungry children in the world?"

"Wait, now. There's a lot of things involved—trade, labor, the price structure, the farm support program, Government procedure."

"Meanwhile the food rots. Anyway we have sold 105 million pounds of dried skim milk to the United Nations International Emergency Fund. Now we hear that's moving into Europe, the Middle East, Asia, and that great numbers of children who haven't been reached by the fund now will have a cup of skim milk a day. That makes some of us feel a little less guilty about all this food piling up in our store houses. But why don't we go on from there?"

"Those things take time. Besides there's a lot of feeling in Congress that we ought to look after our own."

"THEN WHY aren't we getting more of our own food surpluses to children's homes, veterans' hospitals, all the institutions taxpayers support?"

"Now wait! We've placed a good deal of surplus food in institutions. We gave potatoes to the school lunch program, to CARE, to a lot of agencies. But you can't go too fast in this. You'll upset the regular channels of trade."

You feel your head pounding against the familiar stone wall. "Then we're back to the hungry foreigners—"

"But of course potatoes don't ship well."

"But dried milk and eggs do. So do corn and wheat. And if we're buying over half a million pounds of dried milk a day and piling it up in storage mightn't we have a big dumping on our hands some day? How would that look with so many children in the world who don't get a swallow?"

"Oh, stored milk's usable for about a year. Anyway we can't be expected to provide milk for every Hottentot — free. It all comes back to the dollar shortage."

Again you feel yourself butting against the wall. "Well anyway, there's a lot of talk now in the U. N. about getting this country to give or sell at a low price its milk, eggs and other stored foods for children everywhere who need food."

"But any such proposal would have to come from the Security Council—that's what the Secretary General said. And of course the Soviet Union would veto."

"ANYWAY" you insist, "a start on such a movement's been made. The dried milk purchase was the first use of a food surplus through a United Nations agency. When people here realize how far that milk is reaching, how an additional 2 million children in Europe alone are going to get their cups of milk through the summer, they may demand that more of this stored food be moved in a similar way."

"But how far can we go in such international handouts? It's all very complex."

"Maybe so but a lot of people are beginning to wonder if its good sense, good diplomacy or good morals for us to sit tight with our warehouses crammed with food while so much of the world is impoverished. Look at the church bodies calling for distribution of this surplus."

"You've got to consider the U. S. taxpayer, trade relations, the effect on agriculture."

You feel a sinking frustration. But you make a final rally. "All right! All the more reason for wading into it—and quick! Our Government turned down the plan for an international commodity clearing house the U. N. Food and Agriculture Organization proposed. Now then, it's up to it, the rich man with his barns bursting, to find an alternative. In the meantime are we going to sit like a complacent miser on the stuff piled up? Are we going to give up and say our brains can't cope with overproduction—in a world of hunger? If not, then why don't we start things moving by taking a big gamble in altruism? It might bring in some dividends more valuable than dollars."

"Mrs. Sanger's Visa"

The attack on your editorial, "Mrs. Sanger's Visa," made in Rev. William Steffen's letter of February 18, is both unfair and sophistical. It puts words into your mouth which you did not mean. Nowhere can I find you saying that the majority of Japanese women know of Mrs. Sanger and are pining away for her doctrines. You did say she has devoted followers, which is an ascertainable fact.

One thing that has always been implicit in our American way of life is fair play. It is manifestly unfair to support censorship, and then claim that one believes in free speech, all the while reserving the right to impute evil motives and a lack of intelligence to an opponent. That is exactly what a segment of American clergymen are doing; that is how they lay themselves open to criticism. If they truly want to promote brotherhood and harmony let them cease their present tactics.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Enter Sir Neville

JAMES BRUCE, a shrewd New York promoter, contributed handsomely to the Truman campaign fund before November 2, 1948. He thus in effect bought Truman Administration common stock when it was being quoted at close to zero. Truman common has now appreciated so heavily that Mr. Bruce expects to exchange his block of shares for no less a commodity than the London embassy.

It is reported that this valuable property has already been knocked down to Mr. Bruce by the White House. Whether or not this is so, Mr. Bruce is certainly confident that the rich prize is within his grasp. Any number of people have been assured that he is to replace the present Ambassador, Lewis Douglas, within the next two or three months.

At the same time, Douglas has with some difficulty been persuaded by the State Department to remain in London at least throughout this year. Douglas himself would prefer to leave his post, for reasons of health and personal finances. But at this crucial turning-point in Anglo-American relations, the State Department rightly considers the able Douglas' services indispensable. Douglas has therefore reluctantly agreed to stay on.

IF DOUGLAS is now nevertheless replaced by Bruce, it will be an event of the utmost significance in a whole series of ways. For one thing, the relations between this country and its most important ally have never been more strained. Douglas has made a brilliant success in London. Aside from campaign contributions, Bruce's only visible qualification for the post is his record as Ambassador to Argentina, where he became cozily intimate with the tin-pot dictator, Juan Peron, and his flashy wife Evita. To appoint Bruce to London could mean only that the Administration did not take the Anglo-American alliance seriously. It would certainly weaken, and might well dissolve, that alliance.

Moreover, if Bruce is sent to London, it will be only the beginning of a larger process. If campaign contributions are to be the major criterion for key appointments, men like James Bruce's able brother David Bruce, Ambassador in Paris, and James Dunn in Rome are sure to be replaced by generous contributors of the stamp of Laurence Steinhardt and Stanton Griffis. Mrs. Perle Mesta makes something of a joke of the United States, as Minister in Luzembourg, but otherwise she does no great harm. But a general Mesta-ization of American representation abroad would be anything but a joke.

Yet the most important issue in the Bruce matter can be very simply defined. It is whether or not Secretary of State Dean Acheson is to be master in his own house.

THERE IS NO mystery about the identity of Bruce's chief Administration sponsor. At the very begining of his tenure of office, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson bluntly informed high State Department officials that he and the President had agreed that "my man Jim Bruce" was to go to London. Acheson has nevertheless more than once succeeded in having the Bruce appointment deferred.

If Johnson now has his way, the most important American diplomatic official abroad will in fact be responsive to Johnson rather than Acheson. Johnson will thus be well on the way to becoming master in Acheson's foreign policy house.

The nature of the Johnson foreign policy is already clear. It consists essentially of gaseous bluster about "licking Joe Stalin," overlaid on a business-as-usual "economy" program which is sapping the sinews of American strength. This kind of policy can have only one ultimate result—the shattering of the Western federation against Soviet expansion.

There is a striking historical parallel for the situation in which Acheson now finds himself. In April, 1937, when it was already clear that Nazi military power was rapidly surpassing the strength of the Western allies, Sir Neville Henderson was sent to Berlin by Neville Chamberlain and Sir Horace Wilson. Over the ineffective protests of British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, Henderson was given the mission of appeasing Hitler, in the hope that Chamberlain might be allowed to continue his business-as-usual policy. For almost a year Eden remained as Foreign Secretary, in elegant impotence, no longer really master in his own house, lending a surface air of respectability to an already intolerable situation. Then came Munich, and in March, 1948, when disaster had already irreparably occurred, Eden resigned.

Fortunately, it is unlikely that Acheson will make Eden's choice. For Acheson clearly means to be Secretary of State in fact as well as in name. Moreover, whenever Acheson has stood firm against Johnson in the past, President Truman has supported him in the end.

Mental Illness

By Marquis Childs

Cost Of Neglected Research

REMEMBER not so long ago that rash of articles and books about the shocking condition of the Nation's mental institutions?

Childs

The interest even broke over into the movies and at least one powerful film came out of it.

That flurry of interest undoubtedly produced good. Some of the more filthy medieval asylums were cleaned up. The poor, tortured inmates were given at least a chance for decency and comfort.

But most of those same people who briefly engaged the attention of the outside world are still locked up. Some of them with adequate care might be released and become self-supporting members of society. Others, if science had the money for research, might be cured.

A group of doctors and public-spirited citizens went to Congress the other day to tell this story. It is really a pretty appalling story.

Half the hospital beds in the country are occupied by mental patients. One in every 18 persons is suffering from one form There is an immediate need for 350,000 more beds for mentally ill patients who cannot now be hospitalized.

If you want to paint in ever darker colors, you can add the figures of sex crimes, alcoholism, divorce; all symptoms of nervous and emotional disorder and all sharply on the increase. or another of mental illness costs up to half the country's total bill for sickness, only 2 percent of the money spent on research goes for this phase of study and exploration.

THE DOCTORS and the public-spirited citizens comprising the National Committee for Mental Hygiene were asking Congress for help. Three years ago there was created in the United States Public Health Service the National Institute of Mental Health. The institute received a small appropriation for the current year and $9,944,000 is included in the budget for 1950-51.

The committee is asking Congress to increase this to 26 million dollars. That would go for research projects in connection with hospitals, asylums and universities. Many of these projects were long since approved, but they have been put on the shelf for lack of money.

That is especially frustrating and tragic to the doctors because they are beginning to think they may be on the trail of a treatment for a stubborn and hitherto incurable form of insanity known as schizophrenia. Schizophrenia accounts for nearly 50 percent of all patients who have been in mental hospitals for 10 years or more. The new experimental treatment is based on the use of cortisone and acth, the recently discovered hormones that have had some remarkable results in arthritis and rheumatism.

THAT WORD schizophrenia should be familiar just now even to casual newspaper readers. It means, in simplest terms, a split personality, and it was part of the confession of Klaus Fuchs who admitted to years of treason while deceiving his friends in his adopted country, Great Britain, and his coworkers in atomic energy.

The psychiatrists are skeptical of Fuchs' claim to "controlled schizophrenia." They say there is no such thing. But to the ordinary person it will seem that deception and treason on such a scale must have originated in a diseased, if incredibly brilliant, mind.

The case of Fuchs seems in a monstrous and bigger-than-life fashion to illustrate the sickness of a divided world; the sickness of Europe from the contamination of which we are not entirely free. We had better start trying to learn something more about the diseases that cause such suffering and anguish. At times the sickness of the mind seems to threaten the very existence of "normal" humanity.

In the wartime drive for atomic fission a search was carried on, the like of which had never been seen before. Never had so many brains, and first-rate brains, been concentrated on one problem. By comparison to that concentration of brain power, even the cost—2 billion dollars—seems insignificant.

When the war first ended, we heard talk about how such a concentration could be brought to bear on cancer, tuberculosis, heart disease, the plagues that paralyze and kill. That burst of idealistic hope seems to have died out quite awhile ago.

But surely there should be a little more money to attack this worst of all plagues; this living death that condemns so many fellow human beings to darkness. And if practical men insist on statistics, it might even be an investment that would eventually save a part of the billion dollars which is the estimated cost of this plague in America today.

Film Industry Lays Claim to Press Freedom

By The Associated Press

The motion picture industry yesterday told Congress it is "a part of the press, the freedom of which is guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution." On that ground it asked repeal of the 20 percent tax on movie tickets.

This novel argument was presented to the House Ways and Means Committee, now considering President Truman's proposals for cuts in some taxes and increases in others.

The President's program would leave the movie taxes unchanged, but would cut the "sales taxes" on furs, jewelry, luggage, and toilet articles, and on telephone, telegraph and transportation charges. The program would raise some business taxes.

Along with hearing the movie people, the committee got requests for tax cuts from spokesmen for opera, concert managers, symphony, museums, actors, musicians, fairs and expositions, amusement parks, pools and beaches, taverns, cabarets, hotels, restaurants and bartenders.

It also heard arguments from the television industry that the 10 percent tax Mr. Truman has proposed on manufacturers' sales of television sets would be a mistake, that it would retard a new industry.

Milo F. Christiansen, superintendent of recreation for the District of Columbia told the committee the tax on admission to recreation activities "discourages participation in wholesome and healthful recreation pursuits which are predominantly for our children. . ."

The tax was a wartime measure which was "never intended to apply beyond the war years," Christiansen said. He spoke for the American Recreation Society and the American Institute of Park Executives in addition to the District Recreation Board.

Abram F. Myers and Gael Sullivan—the latter a former executive director of the Democratic National Committee—made the argument for the movie industry.

In other arguments for repeal of the admissions tax they said movies "are an integral part of American life—a necessity, not a luxury"; as applied to movies, the tax "is primarily a tax on the middle-income groups"; and the tax "threatens the existence of the country's greatest peacetime entertainment medium, which also is an indispensable part of the Government's communications system in time of war."

Union Makes Plea

David B. Smith of Abington, Pa., vice president of Philco Corp., told the committee "television is a new industry, in a formative stage, and would be jeopardized by the imposition of an excise tax" on television receivers.

Lawson Wimberly, representing the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL), also protested the proposed 10 percent television tax on behalf of the union members employed in the industry.

Conferees Agree

Oleo Issues Are Settled At Meeting

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The 64-year fight to get rid of discriminatory taxes on oleomargarine neared final victory yesterday.

Senate and House conferees voted out a measure that cleared away all taxes on margarine, both yellow and white. These ranged to 10 cents a pound for yellow margarine, ½ of a cent a pound on uncolored; plus annual license fees of $600 a year for manufacturers of yellow margarine, $480 a year for wholesalers, and $48 a year for retailers of the yellow product. For dealers in white margarine the licenses ranged much lower.

The conference measure dropped a Senate provision that all yellow margarine sold at retail must be packaged in three-cornered shape.

This had been put in by the Senate. By getting it taken from the bill yesterday, the conferees made the victory virtually complete for the Nation's housewives and margarine manufacturers who bombarded Congress for the repealer.

The conference bill contained these provisions:

1. That yellow margarine sold at retail be in packages of not more than one-pound each.

2. That the words "oleomargarine" or "margarine" appear both on the outside package and on the wrapper of each section. On the outside the words must be as large as any words on the package. On the inside wrapper they must be at least 20-point type (slightly more than ¼-inch) in size.

3. That a "full and accurate" settlement of all ingredients be printed on all margarine packages.

Provisions of both the Senate and House bills left in the conference measure, include:

1. That eating houses using yellow margarine must post notices to that effect.

2. That margarine served in public eating houses be served in triangular patties.

3. That strict inspection by the Pure Food and Drugs Administration be maintained of all margarine plants.

The sale of yellow margarine is still prohibited by State laws in 16 States, including some of the largest. These are Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming. Although Illinois prohibits the sale of yellow margarine it permits it to be manufactured. It is one of the largest margarine manufacturing States.

Senate Gives Arizona Victory In Colorado River Water Feud

Arizona won a resounding victory yesterday in its long feud with California over division of the waters of the lower Colorado River where it forms the boundary between the two States.

The Senate, by a roll-call vote of 55 to 28, passed a bill by Arizona's two Democratic Senators, Carl Hayden and Ernest W. McFarland, to authorize a multimillion-dollar water development project in central Arizona.

Only a few relatively minor amendments offered by the sponsors were agreed to outside of some changes recommended by the Interior Committee. One after another amendment by California Senators William F. Knowland (R.) and Sheridan Downey (D.) were knocked down by one-sided votes that gave early notice that Arizona was going to win.

Among the committee amendments was one which authorized adjudication of the rights to the waters of the Colorado River, long in dispute between the two States, by the Supreme Court.

The measure would authorize Bridge Canyon Dam on the Colorado River above Hoover Dam, and numerous other structures for power, flood control and similar purposes. Major irrigation construction would be deferred pending a Supreme Court rule on Arizona's claim to 1,200,000 acre-feet required for the entire project.

The cost was estimated by the Reclamation Bureau, including irrigation, at 708 million dollars. California opponents asserted the ultimate cost would run to a billion and a quarter to a billion and a half.

Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) of the Interior Committee urged passage of the authorization as the way to get a settlement of the long-standing Arizona-California water controversy. The measure, he said, would be a threat to the asserted rights of California to the Colorado River waters. Without that threat, he said, the Supreme Court would not accept jurisdiction in the row.

The Senate floor took on a strange appearance as the measure was debated. Big posters denouncing the proposal filled the back of the chamber. Put there by California Senators, they called the project "fantastic" and costing more than a billion dollars.

The bill goes to the House, which has a similar measure in the Public Lands Committee.

Pegasus Is Autry Steed This Trip

By Richard L. Coe

ABOUT THE TOWN: When the Nation's top cowboy star forsakes his well-publicized Champion to pilot his own Beechcraft on cross-country tours, you know it's the air age in earnest . . . Gene Autry flies in Thursday for two performances Friday at Uline's, a matinee at 4, a night show at 8:30 . . . The hoss opera hero has some of the qualities you expect in a younger set favorite: he doesn't smoke, gets to bed early and is up by 5:30 ayem; Champion and Champ, jr., are his favorite hobbies . . . He boasts of owning only cowboy suits you see him wear in the movies, with the exception of his Air Force uniform and a dinner jacket his wife made him buy in London 10 years ago . . . Ina, his wife for the past 18 years—and he's had no other—lured him into one hobby he claims he knows nothing about: antique collecting . . . "I don't know a Hepplewhite from a Chippendale," Gene cracks, "but in my dumb way I've picked up some good deals, or so Ina says." . . . The show he's doing at Uline's is a two-hour Western variety business, largely patterned on his Sunday night WTOP show . . . Texas-born, Oklahoma-raised, he's looking forward to saying a personal hello to both States' folks while here.

"STROM-boli" has hit a snag, after all, at Keith's, where it will wind up a 10-day run Friday, to be succeeded Saturday by Walt Disney's long-awaited "Cinderella" . . . That "Bibbidi-Bobbidi-Boo" cartoon is a honey, knowing which, Keith's will open its doors Saturday morning at 8:30.

TODAY'S HOLIDAY brings in four new pictures to the cessation of those who make a habit of catching their flicks fast . . . You have your choice of: "When Willie Comes Marching Home," John Ford's story of a GI who had a top-secret war assignment which proves hard to explain when he gets called mister; "Chain Lightning," a voyage into jet propulsion by the Brothers Warner and with Humphrey Bogart as the pilot, at the Warner; "Backfire," a fight yarn with Gordon MacRae and Virginia Mayo, at the Metropolitan; "Her Wonderful Lie," described as a modern version of Puccini's "La Boheme," at the Unnatural National, with Jan Kiepura, Marta Eggerth, Marc Platt and Janis Carter, whose whole self you see on this page; I'm heading for the Capitol because of the Dunhills and Kay De Witt.

MARJORIE GATESON, down to appear before the House Ways and Means Committee on behalf of reducing the 20 per cent Federal tax for the living theater, was as surprised as this writer to find herself renamed "Margaret" in the first line of yesterday's column, rest of which talked cheerily of Marjorie . . . I told her to think nothing of it, happens everyday to someone, and I'm used to it . . . Hmmmm.

THE PLAZA Theater, getting ready to open at New York ave. and 14th st., is lots nearer with the appointment by Prexy Sam Roth of Al Sherman as publicity adviser . . . Al's a familiar figure round town, did much to put the Hippodrome's foreign film runs on the map. . . . Didja notice that sign over the Hipp entrance: "WATCH FOREOPENING?" No news yet on the Hipp's future.

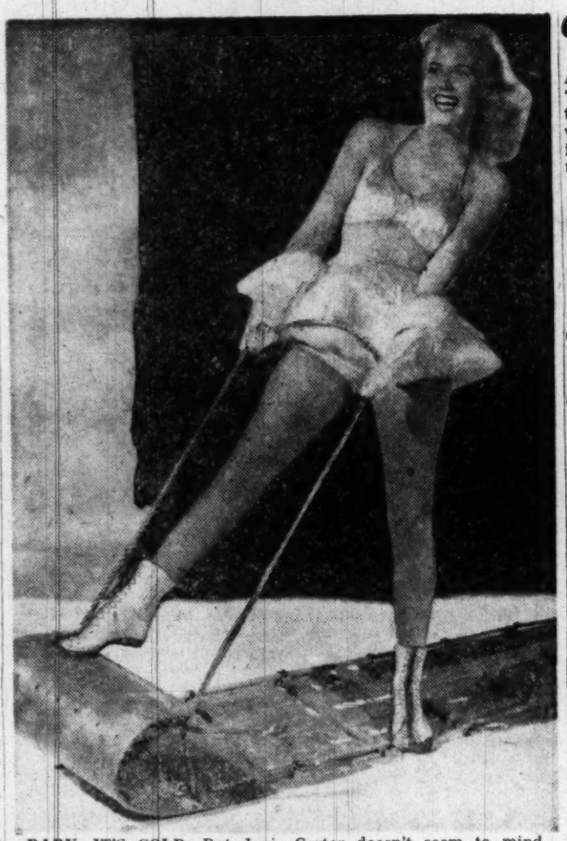
LOOK FOR "All the King's Men" to stick around a bit longer at the Playhouse, where its run is phenomenal . . . It's the favorite in the Oscar sweepstakes, to be run off March 23.

ANOTHER shift in bills today involves the Little, where two old favorites take over, "Storm in a Teacup" and "The Beachcomber" . . . The first is that Scots courtroom comedy wherein an old lady's fight for her mongrel dog becomes a national issue; Vivien Leigh and Rex Harrison are costarred . . . The second is a Somerset Maugham observation on a reformed drunkard, with Charles Laughton and Elsa Lanchester in the leads.

BROOKE JOHNS, who used to sing all those songs in the Ziegfeld Follies and thought he was now a retired gentleman farmer, has taken on another job besides his WBCC "Morning in Maryland" program . . . He'll emcee the "Miss Outdoors, 1950" contest to be held at the Armory during the annual Sportsmen's and Outdoors Show March 3 through 12.

THE INTERNATIONAL Players of International Student House are playing Hugo von Hoffmannstahl's "Electra" Friday and Saturday nights at 1825 R st. . . . The Players stress the fact that they're amateurs, but their past record, which includes Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Aria da Capo," Kapek's "R.U.R." and Shaw's "Misalliance," indicates they aren't afraid to try.

THE MOUNT VERNON Players advise: "Due to the influenza epidemic which has apparently crippled the musical talent of Washington, we will continue auditions for the Kurt Weill folk opera, 'Down in the Valley'." . . . These will be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week at their undercroft playhouse, 900 Massachusetts ave.



BABY, IT'S COLD: But Janis Carter doesn't seem to mind, though it's not clear whether this is the way she appears in "Her Wonderful Lie," the "modernized version of Puccini's "La Boheme," opening today at the Unnatural National with Jan Kiepura and Marta Eggerth in the leads

Man Sentenced To 2 Years in Jail For Auto Fatality

A 29-year-old Alexandria carpenter was sentenced to two years in the Virginia penitentiary yesterday on manslaughter charges growing out of the traffic death November 9 of William H. Brown.

Garland L. Neese of 3304 Mount Vernon ave. was sentenced by Alexandria Corporation Court Judge William P. Woolls. He pleaded innocent to the charge. Brown, 54, of 16 East Howell ave., Alexandria, a railroad engineer, was struck and killed about 10 p. m. November 9 in Alexandria by a car driven by Neese.

Neese testified yesterday he knew he had struck a man and became panicky and kept going.

Greek Identifies 'Ghost Ship' Found In Mediterranean

Valletta, Malta, Feb. 21 (U.P.)—A Greek sea captain identified the "ghost ship of the Mediterranean" today as a British war-surplus craft which tore loose from a tow during a storm last week on the way to Greece.

The United States destroyer MacKenzie yesterday found the former British naval auxiliary Imperia adrift and deserted.

Capt. Vassilios Zacharis said he bought the Imperia from the British Admiralty in Tripoli, Libya, for a Greek shipping firm.

One question remained to be answered: Are American Navy men entitled to salvage for recovering a ship such as the Imperia?

Naval sources in London could give no answer to the question today. They said the Naval Judge Advocate in Washington had been asked for a ruling.

Vienna Boy Choir Performs With Its Accustomed Verve

By Paul Hume

Vienna's musical life has many great traditions.

In the short years since the end of the war some of these have returned to prewar excellence. Among the oldest musical institutions of that great city are its famous Choir Boys.

Last night the current crop of Vienna Choir Boys sang for a delighted audience in Constitution Hall. They still exhibit the beautiful tone and technical precision of old.

They still sing and dance their way through operettas reminiscent of Viennese shows on a grander scale. The high point of their concert last night was a pleasant operetta entiled, "Tales From Old Vienna." Based on themes of Johann Strauss (who else?) the story was slender, but the singing and acting were full of charm.

More than one solo, duet, and ensemble scene stopped the show. It was obvious the boys were having a wonderful time in their playacting.

The program opened and closed in traditional fashion, with classic choral numbers and German songs. In these there were important faults. They are not the responsibility of the singers, but of their director.

The present leader, Harald Hedding, is making the Choir Boys a crack technical machine, but at the expense of almost all musicality. Their tone, pitch, and responses are as fine as ever. But they are being taught to do such bad things.

Their classical motets by Gallus-Handl and Vittoria were beautiful and beyond criticism. But in music by Bruckner and, above all, in Mozart's seraphic Ave Verum, serious departures from permissible style occurred. Mozart's music is marked "adagio" and depends upon a sustained legato from start to finish.

It was taken much too fast last night, and every phrase was cut in two by improper and clipped phrasing. Finally, a song of Hugo Wolf was distorted into a choral version, with all the violence such rearranging necessitated to the original gem-like quality of the music.

One would never touch a painting of Rubens with the thought of improving on the original. How, then, does one presume to do it to a masterpiece of music?

The Vienna Boys are as good as ever—it is their leadership that has suffered.

SHUBERT NAMED IN TRUST SUIT—Lee Shubert and his wife enjoy lunch in Miami Beach, Fla. Shubert, and his brother, Jacob, famed theater owners and producers, have been named in a suit charging them with monopolizing the legitimate theater business in Washington, New York and other cities plans for other legitimate offerings.

The two other corporations named in the Government's suit yesterday were Select Theaters Corp. and the L. A. B. Amusement Corp. All of the corporations are located in New York City.

The suit charges that the defendants "eliminated competition" in the presentation of shows in Washington, New York, Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, Denver, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

The complaint added that the Shubert organization finances shows for other producers and is linked financially with the Theater Guild, Inc.

The Government contends that the Shuberts and Heiman control the booking of legitimate attractions in tryout and road-show cities throughout the United States, and that the Shuberts control the booking of approximately 50 percent of the theaters in New York City.

It is also alleged that the stock of the United Booking Office is owned 50 percent by Heiman and 50 percent by the Shuberts.

The complaint charges that the defendants:

1. Compelled producers to book their attractions exclusively through them.

2. Prevented others from booking attractions.

3. Prevented competition in the presentation of attractions.

4. Refused to let players booked by independents into their theaters.

5. Coerced and intimidated independent theater operators to sell to them either their theaters or a share in the profits by threatening to prevent them from obtaining attractions.

6. Successfully eliminated, by virtue of their combined control of booking and presentation, competition in the Nation's 10 key theatrical cities.

The Government asked the court, among other things, to require the defendants to dispose of all interest either in their booking or presentation branch, and to dispose of all interest and ownership in as many theaters as may be necessary to restore competition in the legitimate theater.

Commenting on the suit, Attorney General J. Howard McGrath said:

"In order for the legitimate theater business to play a significant role in the cultural life of our Nation, it is necessary that its development not be impeded by or stifled by artificial restraints on competition."

The Shuberts did not comment, but Heiman, president of the United Booking Office, said in a statement:

"United Booking Office does not have any contract with any theater or with any attraction. It does not favor any theater over competing theaters or any producer over other producers.

"It does not fix the terms on which the attractions will play in any theater, but merely acts as a go-between to arrange terms that both sides will consider fair."

U. S. Takes Issue With U. N. Annual Economic Report

Lake Success, N. Y., Feb. 21 (U.P.).—The United States sharply attacked today the United Nations' annual economic report because it cited United States import declines as the major cause of the poor world trade picture last year.

Assistant Secretary of State Willard L. Thorp said increased purchases of American goods by other countries played a bigger part than United States import declines in intensifying the dollar-shortage crisis.

He added that cold figures showing a rise in United States unemployment should be no cause for alarm since there have been no signs of decreasing production. Rather, he said, rising unemployment has been largely caused by a jump in the country's total labor force.

Second Painting of Mona Lisa Called Genuine, Worth Million

New York, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—A second painting of the Mona Lisa by Leonardo da Vinci, valued at one million dollars has been discovered, Dr. Thomas M. Judson said today.

The owners said it was entrusted by Marie Antoinette to one of their ancestors, who brought it to this country 153 years ago.

Dr. Judson who identified himself as an archaeologist, art expert and former curator of the Cicognara Collection of the Vatican, said he had authenticated the painting by X-rays, infra-red photographs and other laboratory tests.

"This painting in my opinion is by the hand of Leonardo da Vinci, and was the one he began and worked upon while perhaps doing the Louvre picture," Dr. Judson said. "This Mona Lisa shows a younger woman that the Louvre version."

Dr. Judson said he thought the painting was done not later than 1506.

The painting is owned by Dr. Ambrose W. Vernon, of Hanover, N. H., and Winter Park, Fla., and his brother's widow, Mrs. Alice Vernon.

Big Virginia Bond Issue Due Monday

By S. Oliver Goodman

Public offering of a 23-million-dollar Virginia bond issue is scheduled next Monday, it was learned yesterday.

The 3½ percent revenue bonds have been authorized by the Elizabeth River Tunnel District, a political subdivision of the State. The new 30-year issue is expected to be offered on a yield basis of 3.25.

Arrangements for the sale are being made by Alex Brown & Sons and B. J. Van Ingen & Co., Inc.

The bonds mark the initial financing for construction of a toll bridge and tunnel between Portsmouth and Norfolk, Va. The bridge is to be erected over the east branch of the Elizabeth River and the tunnel is to be put through under the south river.

Location and plans for the bridge and tunnel have been approved by the Chief of Engineers and Secretary of the Army of the United States. The bonds are described as exempt from Federal and State income taxes.

REPORT SPIKED: Maxwell Abell, head of a syndicate which owns the Willard Hotel, yesterday denied there was any basis to a report that the famous Washington Hotel was about to change hands. Abell told The Washington Post by phone from his Chicago office that the rumor came as "a complete surprise" to him and that there are "no negotiations under way at present." The Abell Hotels group, which operates five other hotels, bought the 500-room Willard early in 1946 for a reported $3,150,000.

ODD LOTS: A plan of the three Warner brothers to sell their 25 percent interest in the theater chain to a banking firm fell through, stockholders were told at the annual meeting in Wilmington, Del. . . . Botany Mills shareholders were told that wool prices are rising steadily and "must eventually be reflected in the prices of both textiles and garments." . . . New Friday night banking hours at three branches of Suburban National Bank have proved popular with customers, President Fred L. Lutes reported. . . . Dun & Bradstreet states that business failures in week ended February 15 totaled 218, against 195 in preceding week and 293 in same 1949 period. . . . Capital Transit common stock reached a long-time high of 30½ yesterday on the Washington Stock Exchange and its bid price advanced to 30.

PLANS: The Southern Pacific Co. asked Interstate Commerce Commission authority to issue $37,727,600 of convertible debentures. The interest rate would be fixed by public bidding. The railroad also requested permission to issue 754,552 shares of its authorized but unissued common stock. This would be held in reserve for conversion of the debentures. Proceeds would be used in connection with a $97,329,000 improvement program which Southern Pacific said it will carry out this year.

Virginia House Votes Doctors Reciprocity

By a Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Feb. 21.—The House of Delegates today passed Fenwick "borderline reciprocity" bill for doctors and sent it to the Governor for his signature.

In other developments in the General Assembly:

The Senate committee on counties, cities and towns passed by indefinitely three bills introduced by Senator Andrew W. Clarke, of Alexandria, to provide for changes in the Fairfax County form of government.

The House education committee reported favorably the Lynch bill to increase the salaries of Fairfax School Board members from $300 to $600. An amendment reduced the $900 figure originally proposed by Delegate Edwin Lynch of Fairfax.

The House committee on counties, cities and towns reported favorably a bill sponsored by Delegate J. Maynard Magruder, of Arlington, to permit his county to enact criminal laws paralleling those of the State and to collect fees for misdemeanor convictions.

The borderline reciprocity bill, introduced by Senator Charles R. Fenwick, of Arlington, provides that doctors from the District of Columbia and States bordering Virginia may treat patients in Virginia upon payment of a $1 license fee.

Present law requires registration of such out of State practitioners and payment of a $50 license fee, a law which will continue in effect for doctors establishing offices in Virginia.

The Fairfax County change of government bills were killed in committee at the request of Senator Clarke. Members of five county organizations appeared at a public hearing last week in opposition to the bills, charging they would "confuse the issue" of a current drive to hold a referendum on changing to the county manager form of government.

In the same committee, a bill introduced by Senator Fenwick was set for public hearing at 3 P. M. Thursday. Requested by the Arlington County Board, it would grant Arlington the same power for issuing franchises for public utilities as cities now have.

Maryland U. Report on Regents Hit

By Dorothea Andrews

Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21.—"Give us the money and don't ask us any questions."

That was how Delegate Horace P. Whitworth, jr. (R., Allegany County) today summed up the purport of the House education committee's report on the University of Maryland.

"This Legislature should have the power to scrutinze the expenses of any State department and knock the barnacles off; if we don't those barnacles will sink the State of Maryland," Whitworth said.

Ask Power for Regents

The House committee report recommended that the university continue to submit detailed budget estimates, but that once the appropriations are made to the university, its Board of Regents be given "full authority" for spending funds.

Whitworth charged that the committee's report was "another step toward usurpation" of the powers of the people of Maryland over their State agencies."

"Most of the committee's recommendations," Whitworth continued, "could have been influenced by the president of the university himself. Those resolutions are not new. They were made by the president of the university before the ways and means committee back in 1947 and 1949."

The House session had barely goten underway today when two delegates asked if the "full education committee" had seen the report, and been given minutes of the meetings held by a subcommittee in its preparation of the report.

No Meeting Held—Tyler

Committee Chairman Clarence E. Tyler (D., Anne Arundel) said no meetings had been held of which all committee members had not been appraised, and added "it isn't possible for us to dig out members if they don't come to meetings." He added that no sessions had been held without a majority present.

Tyler added that Whitworth's summation of the purport of the report "certainly does violence to the intelligence of the membership of this House, when obviously everyone knows that every budget submitted must be approved by the Assembly."

The committee report had charged that the University of Maryland "is surrounded by more restrictions than any other State university in the country and asked that it be removed from such rigid control for more efficient operation.

Senate Votes Oyster Bill In Virginia

By Richard Morris

Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Feb. 21.—In hopes that Maryland will "see the error of her ways," the Virginia Senate today unanimously passed the Unruh Potomac River oyster bills.

The vote came after word was received from free State legislators that the bills, to set up a bi-State commission through mutual consent, haven't a prayer in the Maryland General Assembly.

Meanwhile the House killed a "bonus" bill for its members as one of the busiest days of the 1950 legislative session had these major developments:

The House killed, 64 to 25, a resolution by Frank Moncure of Stafford to give each delegate $300 of expense money. A similar resolution was adopted two years ago without a recorded vote.

The House appropriations committee reported the general appropriation bill, carrying $598,285,000—an increase of $785,000 since it was introduced.

The Senate passed 27 to 9 a Senate bill to have the State Board of Education administer tests every two years to see what public school children have learned.

The Senate also debated a bill to limit the speed of heavy trucks to 45 miles per hour on State highways. It probably will come up Wednesday after the land reappraisal bill.

The "bonus" resolution revived a controversy of 1948 when the House action drew widespread editorial criticism and many members returned the "bonus" checks. Moncure argued that the legislative salaries were not enough to pay expenses but W. H. Irvine, of Campbell, said the proper thing was to raise the salaries of the next Legislature.

State Gets Sales Tax Repealer

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21 (AP).—A single-shot bombardment was leveled on Marylands sales tax today after two years of relative peace on that front in the General Assembly.

Senator T. F. Johnson (D., Worcester) introduced a measure to repeal the sales tax just before the Senate deadline for new bills.

He wants to supplant it with a one percent gross receipts tax, levied on all the business done by retail establishments — regardless of whether there is net profit.

Consumers have been clamoring to be rid of the two percent sales tax, Johnson said. He said privately the comptroller's office has estimated a gross receipts tax, levied at the source of business and industry, would produce almost as much as the 27 million dollars received from the two percent consumer sales tax.

He rushed it in at the start of a session which saw the Senate turn down a much-amended measure to maintain a legislative watch on lobbyists.

The bill, which would ban lobbying by public officials, was rejected 13-12 after Senator Della (D., Baltimore, Sixth) said it would flout the constitution.

Across the hall in he House, delegates:

1. Forced, for the first time this session, the powerful rules committee to give up possession of a bill the committee wanted to hold.

2. Overrode the education committee and adopted a resolution asking the Allegany County School Board to proceed with construction of new schools in Lonaconing and Ellersie as quickly as possible.

Thirty Baltimore City Democrats led the drive to get a city bill out of the rules committee, where it had marked time since February 1. They put their names on the petition which brought it to the floor. The bill would authorize Baltimore to spend $1,000,000 for additional traffic lights.

The Allegany School Board resolution had been introduced by Delegate Reed (R., Allegany). He said it was drawn up in l opes that quick action on construction would give much needed jobs to residents of an area hard hit by unemployment.

The education committee had turned the resolution down on grounds it contained a veiled directive to the school board and that the General Assembly had no right to meddle into local affairs of this kind.

$78,966 Awarded in Land Suit

A Montgomery County Circuit Court jury yesterday awarded $78,966.75 to the owners of the Hot Shoppes property at Wisconsin ave. and East-West hwy., Bethesda, for land taken by the Maryland State Roads Commission for widening of the intersection there.

The award climaxed a four-day hearing before Judge Stedman Prescott during which opposing real estate experts placed values varying from $48,000 to $142,000 on the 18,987 square feet of ground taken from the two street frontages.

The State Roads Commission offered $57,048 for the property last August when it took the land. That sum was posted with the clerk of the Circuit Court in escrow pending the outcome of the condemnation suit.

The entire property is held in trust for the children of Charles B. Hawley by the Munsey Trust Co. which was represented at the hearing by Bethesda Attorneys Arthur B. Lambert and Edward Northrop.

The Roads Commission's case was argued by Assistant Maryland Attorney General Joseph B. Buscher and Ralph G. Shure, Bethesda attorney.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ON THAT notable day when Man O' War didn't run a winning race, Willie Knapp had the leg up on the appropriately named Upset, the only horse ever to head Big Red. Thirty years later, on this upcoming Saturday at Hialeah, little Mr. Knapp will be shooting at another upset—in the $50,000 Widener Handicap.

He's the trainer, now, for Mrs. E. L. Hopkins, the Cleveland turf woman who owns the 5-year-old Three Rings. Knapp will saddle the horse and give Jockey Headley Woodhouse the riding orders he calculates might beat Coaltown, the Calumet giant which will go to the post as an odds-on favorite.

POVICH

Mrs. Hopkins bought Three Rings on impulse, relates Everett Clay, the Hialeah publicist in a pretty little anecdote captioned "So She Bought A Race Horse." In the paddock at Hialeah two years ago, so the story goes, she was smitten with the appearance of Three Rings and remarked to Trainer Sammy Smith, "I'd like to buy that horse."

"You can have him right now," Smith said, and the deal was made, on the spot, for $7500. An announcement was made immediately over the loud-speaker system that Three Rings would run the next race in the colors of Mrs. Hopkins.

NO INVESTOR ever got a quicker return on an investment. Within the next 15 minutes, Three Rings had won the race, and paid off at a $50 mutuel. Under Knapp's training, he has rolled up $170,000 in purses for the lady.

All last year, in the 4-year-old classics, Three Rings was known as Coaltown's shadow. Twice at Hialeah, once at Gulfstream, and once at Jamaica, Three Rings gave futile chase to the Calumet ace. But 10 days ago in Hialeah's McLennan Handicap, Three Rings caught up with Coaltown and beat him by two lengths.

And so it's an awaited rematch that is coming up in Saturday's Widener. The betting public is expected to install Coaltown as the heavy favorite despite the disaster in the McLennan. The Calumet giant had excuses. He was in there without the customary tune-up race.

Coaltown needed that one to bring him into fitness for The Widener, they say, and they point out, too, that he was conceding 15 pounds to Three Rings in the weights. Saturday is supposed to spell out a different story.

BUT A COUPLE of facts in favor of Three Rings are ineradicable. Coaltown did race into the lead in the stretch of the McLennan for a brief few lengths, heading Three Rings. The Hopkins horse came again to get home in front in the final eighth in a duel in which Coaltown showed no liking for the distance, at least not that day.

Saturday's race will be at a mile and a quarter, an eighth longer. That, too, could be in Three Rings' favor. Three times in the nine races Coaltown has lost, he chucked early leads. And the weight difference on Saturday will be only one pound less than it was in the McLennan.

There are other aspects to The Widener, though. It's significant that there are no fillies in the expected field of 12 that will go to the post. Despite the triumph of Columbiana in The Widener of '37, the girl horses are rarely ready to contest with the boys at this stage of the racing season. It's an old racing adage that in the spring a young mare's fancy turns to thoughts of romance and that they are bad racing risks.

AN ENTRY THAT will also draw support is the gelding Royal Governor, owned by Mrs. E. D. Weir. The Governor finished second to Three Rings in the McLennan, beaten a length, but a length ahead of Coaltown. He's a 6-year-old son of Pilate.

Originally, Trainer Jim Ryan was grooming Royal Governor as a jumper according to one story. The horse wasn't taking too kindly to the jumps, and was kicking up such a fuss that the groom, with his own shins battered, issued an ultimatum to Trainer Ryan. "Boss, if you don't quit tryin' to make a jumper out'n this boss, I quit," he said. Rather than lose a highly-valued groom, Ryan returned the Governor to the flat.

The Bermill Farm will saddle a 20-1 shot named Bug Juice in the $50,000 race. The gelding is not without distinction. In a poll of the turf writers, he was unanimously voted the ugliest-named horse at the track. Two years ago Bug Juice lost a race at Hialeah by a photo. "With a name like that, he should," one writer observed.

Colonials Start 'Spring' Drills With Biggest Squad in Years

George Washington University yesterday beat its neighbors to the punch by starting "spring" football practice a month early. That was so G.W.'s versatile athletes could play baseball in late March.

At the Frog Island training camp, just across the 14th st. bridge in Virginia, Coach Bo Rowland got a look at the largest squad he's had since coming to G.W. two years ago. Sixty men had on pads and uniforms.

There was evidence that Rowland's building program is about to bear results. At least 12 players scaled better than 200 pounds and a goodly percentage of them were young linemen. Lack of weight and depth in the line has been G. W.'s most chronic shortcoming in recent years.

Most of the youngsters were up from the 1949 freshman team, which Coach Ray Hanken called the greatest in the school's history. It was undefeated, beating Georgetown and Maryland.

Newcomers who will bolster the varsity line are Tackle John Sestokas, 240 pounds, Frank Continetti, 220, and Tom Flyczyk, 230. Guards Bob Allwine, 195, Joe Wotjowicz, 200, and Bill O'Ragon, 205. Ends Fotis Karousatos, 210, and Jim Englund, 200, and Centers Ed Edgerton, 200, and Ken Samuelson, 195.

There'll be plenty of the old faithful linemen on hand, too. Jim Feula, whom Rowland considers one of the best in the area, was on hand, so were veterans Clarence Drayer, tackle, Charlie Gunner and Dave Shiver, guards, Talbot Dredge, center, and Bill Szayni and Charlie Butler, ends.

In the backfield, there's, first of all, Andy Davis, who is ready to continue as the best passer and runner on the team. He'll have support from such sophomores as Jack Baumgartner, Bino Berreira and Doonie Waldren, and such juniors as Jack Tivnan, Bob Cilento and Bill Shaw.

That's a crew which figures to improve quite a bit on G.W.'s 4-6 record of last year.

American Host Tonight

American U. closes its home basketball season tonight against Western Maryland, usual late troublemaker.

Western Maryland, off to a ragged start that probably will cost it a Mason-Dixon Conference playoff berth, has a winning streak of three straight.

Georgetown, playing the rest of its games away, makes a stop in Philadelphia to play Pennsylvania tonight. In other games involving area teams, Rutgers plays Navy at Annapolis; Howard's at Lincoln, and Washington and Lee at Richmond.

Arlington Hall's Demonge Scores 69 Points in 124-60 Win

Arlington Hall Pfc. Don Demonge had a basketball night last night that would have made a general proud.

Demonge, 6-foot-4 center from Cincinnati, scored 69 points in Arlington Hall's 124-60 victory over Ft. Myer's South Post. Both high totals smashed previous marks in the Military District of Washington League.

The victory was the thirteenth straight for Arlington Hall. It's in second place in the MDW league with a 15-4 record. Ft. Myer's North Post took two decisions, one by three points; one by one point.

Rochester Beats Caps For 5th Time

Special Dispatch to The Post

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 21.—The Washington Caps went about it the wrong way here tonight and wound up losing their fifth game in five starts against Rochester, 84-76.

Bob Feerick's men spotted the Royals' 10 points. They've displayed a penchant for slow starts of late. As usual, it was a fatal error.

The rest of the night the Caps spent in futile pursuit. They came within six points at halftime and at the end of the third period. Near the finish they were within four, 80-76, but the opening bulge never could be overcome.

Don Otten led the visitors with 21 points. Although he scored only four field goals, he converted 13 of 16 free throw attempts. Rochester had a double answer for Otten's scoring efforts—Bob Davies had 22 and Bill Calhoun 20 points.

Due to a mixup, Sol Levy was the lone official. The teams were tied in field goals, 26 each, but Levy was observant enough to give Rochester 38 free throw tries and the Royals converted 32. The Caps got only 29, making 24.

John L. Lewis Has Hand in Switch Of GW Game

The fine hand of John L. Lewis was responsible for a little Southern Conference basketball schedule shuffling yesterday.

George Washington U. originaly was slated to play Wake Forest at Eastern High Saturday night. Due to the coal strike, Eastern won't be heated so the game has been shifted to Uline Arena Saturday afternoon at four o'clock.

Turns out to be a break for high school students. They'll be at Uline Arena for the Interhigh championship game which will start at 2 o'clock on the same afternoon. G. W. has invited them to stay over and watch the Colonials play—free.

Le Baron Talks With Redskins

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

LITTLE EDDIE LeBARON, boyish 20-year-old, started talking seriously about a pro football career yesterday at the Redskins' office.

The three-time Little All-America quarterback at College of Pacific, flew in from California to begin contract negotiations with Head Coach Herman Ball. He's not as naive as he appears.

ED LeBARON

There's little chance that he won't agree shortly to the usual "undisclosed figure," but Eddie already has established himself as a sharp operator.

He and California's Bob Celeri recently promoted a phenomenal February Grape Bowl game at Lodi. They had a sellout crowd of more than 24,000 and LeBaron revealed that, after all expenses, he and Celeri each cleared more than $2000.

LeBaron is taking a "persuasive speech" course at College of Pacific, where he will be graduated in June, and told his teacher if he does all right in his talks with the Redskins he expects an "A."

IN THIS PRO game of behemoths, even the "little" men are getting big. LeBaron, smallest man conceded a chance to make good in pro ranks since Davy O'Brien, is 5-foot, 8¾ inches tall and, clothed, weighs 182.

O'Brien, TCU passing star who played two years with the Philadelphia Eagles, was only 5-foot-7 and weighed 151. Li'l Davey was good enough to set one record that still stands, completing 33 passes against Washington in 1940.

LeBaron dismisses any talk of his size handicapping him by saying, "It hasn't so far, I don't think it will now." He never was hurt in four years of varsity ball with College of Pacific.

HERMAN BALL

Obviously, Coach Ball thinks he's big enough—and good enough. Ball caught him in the East-West game in which he was named the outstanding player.

In that game LeBaron, a T-formation quarter-

Now It's Birdie Who Gets Golfer

Newport, Wales, Feb. 21 (AP). R. H. Kempt lost his ball to a birdie at the third hole of the Newport Golf Club today.

A magpie swooped down, seized the ball, and carried it high into a tree 150 yards away.

It cost Kempt a stroke and the price of a new ball.

Villanova Fails To Satisfy NCAA Official

Medford, Mass., Feb. 21 (AP).—Clarence P. (Pop) Houston, chairman of the N.C.A.A.'s compliance committee, said today that Boston College is still the only one of seven violators of the so-called "sanity code" back in good standing.

Houston made the statement in discussing a reply from officials of Villanova College, one of the seven cited for noncompliance.

He declined to disclose the contents of the Villanova letter, but said "the answer is not an answer to my letter."

Houston, a Tufts College professor, referred to a letter he sent Villanova, Boston College and three of the other violators asking for written notice they now were in compliance and giving scholarship data.

He said there was "no change" in the status of Villanova. He added the compliance committee's only action in the future would be "positive" and the NCAA policying body would no nothing if it was not satisfied a college was in compliance.

Houston said he did not plan to answer the Villanova letter immediately." The other colleges cited for noncompliance were the University of Maryland, the University of Virginia, Virginia Military, Virginia Polytech and The Citadel.

The letters asking for written notice of compliance were sent to all but the University of Virginia and The Citadel.

Catholic U. Trims Mounts

Frederick, Md., Feb. 21.—Catholic University of Washington, D. C., kept its slim Mason-Dixon Conference tournament berth hopes alive by defeating Mount St. Mary's, 58-53, here tonight.

The Cardinals trailed until only seven minutes were left. Then a free throw by Jim Balint tied it at 44-44. With five minutes left, Jim Losty fired in his fourth straight field goal, and C. U. was in front to stay, 52-50.

It was Catholic's sixth conference win against nine losses

Jackson, Tenn., Feb. 21 (AP). Ellis Kinder said today he had signed up to pitch again for the Boston Red Sox this year at a salary of $20,000, a $12,000 raise.

"That's what I asked for and that's what I got," he commented. He leaves Monday for the Sox camp at Saratoga, Fla.

Kinder won 23 games last year and lost 6.

Veeck Asks $500,000 in Libel Suit Against Ex-Stockholder

CLEVELAND, Feb. 21 (AP).—Bill Veeck, former president of the Cleveland Indians, sued a former stockholder of the baseball team for $500,000 libel today.

Veeck's petition was filed against Jack H. Harris. He said Harris had attempted to injure his reputation in a personal and business way. Harris sued Veeck for $1,200,000 the day he sold the Indians, claiming he spent team money without proper authority.

In today's action in common pleas court, Veeck not only replied to the suit but filed the libel petition as well.

Harris, he said, "attempted to slander, libel and injure him in his personal and private life and his business relations." Veeck said he was "active in the world of sports, including baseball, in which he has and intends to earn his living."

This was the first time Veeck has stated he intends to stay in baseball.

Veeck called Harris' suit the result of a threat. Harris, he said in his petition, had threatened to sue if Veeck would not sell him the team.

He declared every action he had ever taken was approved by the board of directors. Every stockholder, he added, got back $20 for every dollar he put into the team.

Coaltown Beats Mile Record in Sensational Widener Trial

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks: Betting at Hialeah and Sunshine Park goes up. Reason: Cold weather kept the crowd off the beaches. Apprentice Jockey Dick Lawless, star of nearby minor tracks last year, is at Charles Town working out horses while waiting for the opening there a week from Saturday. I'm trying to make up my mind about picking Balan to win Saturday's Widener Handicap. This colt has won only one race—by eight at Pimlico, in a cakewalk—and may be tops in the handicap class this year. Havre de Grace has cut big purses to the point where there's a chance for the track to have a good season. As far as I'm concerned it's OK to cut the big races, but I wouldn't like to see them lower the minimum purses. A cheap horse costs as much to feed as an expensive one.—Bill.

Calumet Ace Goes Route In 1:36:2

Miami, Fla., Feb. 21 (AP).—Calumet Farm's mighty Coaltown proved he was ready for the $50,000 added Widener Handicap at Hialeah Park Saturday by beating the track record for the mile today.

The question was whether racing's Mr. Speed could spot the field from 14 to 25 pounds and still take the grueling mile and a quarter classic.

Coaltown reeled off the mile in 1:36 2/5, a fifth of a second faster than the course record set by Bright Willie in 1942.

Then with regular rider Ovie Scurlock in the saddle, the horse went out a mile and an eighth in 1:49 flat, one and one fifth seconds under the winning time for the McLennan Handicap on February 11.

Even Trainer Ben Jones was in high spirits following the trial. However, he pointed out Coaltown will be asked to pack 132 pounds on Saturday, two pounds more than has ever been carried by a Widener winner.

Largest previous weight package carried to victory in the Widener was 130 on War Admiral in 1938.

Calumet Farm's veteran Armed had a 128-pound impost in 1946

Coaltown has bettered or equalled six world records in his career and has earned $383,275. However, the Calumet speedster has never won a race carrying 132 pounds. The only time he attempted it was in the Equipose Mile at Arlington when he finished second to Star Reward last June.

On Autograph Market

Bobby Jones Worth Two Sammy Sneads

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

KIDS HAVEN'T changed much since the days of The Little Potatoes, We're Hard To Peal—my boyhood gang.

We used to collect colorful baseball pictures that came with a certain brand of cigarettes. A boy who had the first likeness of Tris Speaker in action, for instance, was to be envied.

Haight

Current youngsters are just as enthusiastic over autographs. Just as we traded and bought the coveted pasteboard cards in our day, so present kids barter for certain hard-to-get signatures.

The other night, Billy Bush of 3534 Fulton st. nw., phoned the Sports Department to obtain the address of Ty Cobb.

Noting his 14-year-old voice, we had to ask why he wanted to contact the all-time baseball star.

"I'm collecting autographs and Aaron Dodek, friend of mine, has a Ty Cobb and he won't tell me where he got it," replied Billy.

Delving into the current autograph market, we have discovered that locally an Ezzard Charles is worth two Joe Louises, for the reason that Louis has been available here many times. A Bobby Jones will bring two Sammy Sneads since Snead played here last spring in the National Celebrities golf tournament, while Jones hasn't been around these parts since the first Celebrities event in 1947.

Perhaps the autograph used most for trading purposes is that of Sammy Baugh, eagerly sought by out-of-town collectors but in surplus here, mainly because the Redskin star is a soft touch.

Baugh is No. 1 sports celebrity for giving autographs, in my book. I've been around Sammy a whole lot since he first came to town and I have yet to see or hear of him refusing to sign.

I CAN REMEMBER an exhibition game in Richmond after which Baugh was besieged by an army of younsters. Still on the field, he grabbed a pencil and began autographing.

Darkness came and with it a light drizzling rain. Baugh kept right at his task with some kids lighting matches so he could see what he was doing.

On another occasion, Baugh was leaving Ebbet's Field in Brooklyn after a game. Other Redskins, for the most part, nudged their way through the waves of young autograph-seekers. Baugh finally made his appearance and, inasmuch as we had to catch a Washington train, I thought he would try to wriggle away.

However, Sammy said, "Let's get a little organization into this thing fellows. Line-up and I'll take care of everybody."

And he did.

Babe Ruth was always eager to please, too. I was in St. Louis the day he hit three homers in one game in the World Series. The Babe actually signed his name while the game was in progress for fans who were probably among those booing when he came to the bat for the first time.

My autograph never was a collector's item, although I have given it on occasion.

After the first Santa Anita Handicap, I was at a night spot with Dixie Lee, Bing Crosby, Sonny Workman and Alfred Robertson, the latter two jockeys, of course.

A drunk staggered to our table with a menu and, after the others signed, I added my John Hancock. "What horse did you ride?" he asked. Anyway I have one autograph in fast company.

SOME YEARS BACK, I was coming out of the dressing room door and a youngster ran up to me and, proferring a program, asked for my autograph.

"You don't want mine," I replied. "I don't play with the Redskins."

"I know, I know," he came back, "You're Pounds Haight and I want you to sign."

I pulled out a soft, black newspaper pencil and began to scribble when he jerked the program from my hand and yelled, "Now look what you did. Look what you did."

"Well," I said, "What did I do?"

"Why didn't you look where you were signing?" he protested. "You just ruined Wee Willie Wilkin."

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

Union and Reporter Versions of 1946 Convention Differ

This column is devoted today to two widely different views of the United Public Workers, the union whose ouster from the CIO has been recommended on Communist charges.

First is a letter from Alfred Bernstein, union director of negotiations. It follows:

"The story carried Sunday by Jerry Kluttz regarding the United Public Workers is a classic example of yellow journalism.

"Mr. Kluttz said he went to the 1946 convention of the United Public Workers because he had been supplied with secret information by a mysterious voice—a most handy gadget to have available when indulging in slander. Mr. Kluttz's attendance at that convention had nothing to do with an unknown, unidentified, about-to-be-shot voice. Mr. Kluttz and his colleagues of the Washington press were cordially invited prior to the convention to attend by an actual person, not a ghost, Donald Murphy—at that time publicity director for the United Federal Workers of America. Mr. Kluttz and his associates of the press were assured that the union would place at their disposal full facilities for the transmission of their stories.

'Secret' Talks

"Now for the alleged information that Mr. Kluttz's unknown, unidentified, about-to-be-shot informant gave him. He states that certain union leaders—not all of them—had discussed in highly secret and preconvention gatherings the best way to pull an effective strike against the Federal Government—a walkout that would embarrass Uncle Sam in the eyes of the world.

This one specific thought was debated at length, she said. To launch an organizing drive among the "service" employes of the Government, the elevator operators, char force and so forth, and to pull them out on a strike at the right time. Many of these jobs, she added, were held by Negroes and the leaders agreed they could be easily "used" for this purpose since their plight would arouse public sympathy.

"I want to state emphatically for the union and its officers that there is not one word of truth in that statement, that it is a colossal lie, and that no responsible newspaperman would make such allegations unless he could back them up with proof. Our union, in its 13-year history in the Federal service, never called a strike, never planned a strike, and never contemplated a strike. The record is there for all, including Mr. Kluttz and his unknown, unidentified, about-to-be shot voice, to see.

"As for the allegation that leaders of the union agreed that Negroes could be 'easily used' to strike against the Government, I want to say for the union and all its leaders that this, too, is an unmitigated lie. Our union does not think or act in terms of using Negroes or members of any racial or religious group. Our record on behalf of minority groups is second to none. It was our union which brought about the abolishment of segregation in the Government cafeterias. It is our union which has consistently, honestly and openly fought for equal job opportunities for all Government employes regardless of race, color or creed. And it is our union which is carrying on the active fight before President Truman's Fair Employment Practices Board to open up skilled positions in the Federal service for our Negro citizens.

"Gross Falsehood"

"Mr. Kluttz further states that his unknown, unidentified, about-to-be shot voice told him that a foreign policy resolution had been drafted prior to our 1946 convention. This is another gross falsehood. The foreign policy resolution adopted by that convention was drafted by the Resolutions Committee elected at that convention which consisted of many Government workers representing locals from all sections of the Nation.

"In further discussing the foreign policy resolution, Mr. Kluttz states that:

Then a strange thing happened. A reporter covering the convention for the Communist Daily Worker suggested to union leaders that they get out the foreign policy resolution and get it passed that evening. He was also covering a

Two Named For District Judgeships By Truman

Miss Mary Barlow, Thomas C. Scalley, Both Lawyers Here, Get President's Nod

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday nominated Miss Mary C. Barlow, 32, and Thomas C. Scalley, 50, both members of the local bar, to judgeships in Municipal Court.

The nominations fill two of the three additional judgeships authorized last year by Congress to increase to 13 members the Municipal Court bench.

The third nomination is "still in the works," according to White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross.

Prominently mentioned for the remaining post are Emory G. Smith and Hubert Pair, Assistant Corporation Counsel, according to Congressional sources.

Both contestants are Negroes with substantial sponsorship from various Government officials.

So violent is the controversy between Smith and Pair that the vacancy may go to a white man, the sources said. At present the only Negro on the local judiciary is Armond W. Scott.

Miss Barlow, vivacious and brown-haired, has never tried a case in court, but has aided many judges in deciding cases as legal assistant to the jurists at Municipal Court wth a $5100 annual salary.

"Attractive Nuisance"

She is the only woman on the faculty of National University where she teaches legal bibliography.

A former dean at the school told incoming students that Miss Barlow was the institution's "attractive nuisance." The adjective was obvious, the students were told. The "nuisance" comes from the sighs and full attendance of her classes, the dean said.

She will become the third woman on the Municipal Court bench. However, the appointments, which carry a $13,000 a year salary, are subject to Senate confirmation.

Miss Barlow formerly was a full-time professor of law at Columbus University School of Law where she was one of the youngest women in that position in the Nation. She was admitted to practice law here in 1943.

She is a native of Grafton, W. Va., and has the sponsorship of Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, and of Mrs. India Edwards, head of the Democratic National Committee Women's Division.

She resides with her mother, Mrs. Mary L. Barlow, at 1401 Columbia rd. nw. The new jurist is a graduate of Columbus University and the Catholic University Graduate School of Arts and Sciences.

Boston Man

Scalley, a native of Boston, has been a largely practiced general lawyer since 1930. He has been a Deputy Register of Wills and assistant legal advisor to the Railroad Retirement Board. He is married and resides at 5019 41st st. nw.

He received his education at Georgetown University and the Georgetown University School of Law where he graduated in 1929.

Scalley describes himself as a "non-joiner" and says that about his only nonprofessional activity, other than in the District Bar Association, is in St. Ann's Parish.

His sponsors included Attorney General J. Howard McGrath and William M. Boyle, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, court sources said.

As to the third appointment, the District Democratic Central Committee has written to President Truman urging that one of the new appointees be a Negro and suggesting Pair.

Smith is understood to have the strong support of Representative William L. Dawson (D., Ill.). Smith is a former professor at Terrell Law School and onetime publicity director of Howard University. He is 63 years old.

Rites to Mark Opening of Lent Today

Ash Wednesday services today in Roman Catholic and Protestant churches will mark the opening of the 40-day Lenten observance which precedes Easter.

In Catholic and some Episcopal churches, traditional ashes will be placed on the foreheads of worshipers as a reminder that man is dust and to dust will return.

Members of all Protestant denominations have been invited to a day-long observance on the theme "God, Man and the Hydrogen Bomb" which begins at 10 a. m. with holy communion at the Washington Cathedral.

Speakers will include Columnist Marquis Childs, Senators Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) and Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.), the Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, and the Rev. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church.

Noonday services to be held throughout Lent will begin at National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N sts. nw., at 12:05 p. m. They are sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches.

Midday rites will also be held at the Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G st. nw., at 12 noon and at the Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol st., at 12:10 p. m. each weekday during Lent.

A Lutheran noonday series will begin at 12:05 p. m. Thursday at the Lutheran Church Center, 736 Jackson pl. nw. The Rev. Dr. Carl R. Simon, pastor of Keller Memorial Church, will speak at the opening service.

Many churches have announced Wednesday evening lecture series and special services for the Lenten season.

The Rev. Clarence T. Nelson, pastor, will conduct an Ash Wednesday service at 8 p. m. today at Augustana Lutheran Church, New Hampshire ave. and V sts. nw. He will speak on "Remember Lot's Wife."

The first in a Lenten series of lectures on current books will be given at 12:30 p. m. Thursday at St. John's Episcopal Church parish hall, 819 16th st. nw. The Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's, will speak on H. A. Overstreet's "The Mature Mind."

5-Day Week For Police Gets Backing

55 Organizations Of Citizens Favor Police Association Work-Cut Proposal

Representatives from 55 citizens and civic groups last night indicated approval of the District Policemen's Association's proposal for a five-day, 40-hour week.

They were guests of the association at its monthly meeting in Odd Fellows' Temple, 419 7th st. nw.

Inspector Clarence Lutz, chairman of the association's legislative committee, outlined the proposed legislation, after which representatives were invited to give their views from the floor.

Lutz said a higher type applicant would be attracted to the department, and that the new hours would result in increased efficiency of the department.

The inspector added that a 40-hour week should result in less retirement for physical disability, also less loss of time from work due to illness.

325 More Men

In answer to a question from George W. Absher of the Hillcrest Citizens Association, he said the proposed hours would probably cost around one-sixth more, and require around 325 men. He thought that the force could get by, however, with 250 additional men, if pressed.

President Herbert P. Leeman was roundly applauded when he pledged the Federation of Citizens Associations to the cause of "shorter hours . . . more money."

Woosley W. Hall, president of the Federation of Citizens Association, joined in with the "solid backing" of his group.

Extra Curricula

Lester H. Steinem, chairman of the Federation of Citizens Associations police and fire committee, said too many police are now used for national and international events here, and paid for by District taxpayers.

B. C. Chapman of the Federation of Civic Associations, said: "We have the finest force in the country; we want the best in the world."

After 24 delegates spoke—some at length—in favor of the proposed legislation, President Royce L. Givens, with an eye on the clock, called for any opposition.

No disapproval was voiced, and 31 other delegates arose to show approval.

Cathedral Heights

The Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night passed five resolutions at a meeting in St. Albans Guild Hall.

The group indorsed a House bill giving the District Recreation Board more authority over Government-owned swimming pools; asked Capital Transit to continue weekly passes even if at an increased rate; opposed encroachments on Old Soliders' Home; reaffirmed its position in favor of ending the District personal property tax; supported the Federation of Citizens Associations' stand favoring repeal of wartime excise taxes.

East Central Civic

The East Central Civic Association last night voted support for a Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. rate increase if the firm applies for another.

The group acted on the recommendation of its public utilities committee at a meeting in the Winfield Scott Montgomery school, 415 P st. nw. The Association also adopted a resolution supporting a 40-hour week for city policemen.

Petworth

The Petworth Citizens Association, in overcoats because of the coal shortage, last night adopted a resolution favoring the retention of Central High School for white students.

Some 30 members shivered in the Petworth Library, Georgia ave., and Upshur, sts., nw., where heat had been reduced to conserve coal. The association also indorsed the Red Cross fund drive, Brotherhood Week, and the candidacy of Walter M. Bird 1444 Juniper st., nw., for a citizen's award from the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

District Heights

The District Heights Citizens Association yesterday asked the Prince Georges County commissioners to extend Addison rd., from its present terminus at Walker Mill rd. to the town limits of District Heights.

The association said the extension would reduce traffic and provide a shorter route to metropolitan Washington. The request was taken under advisement.

Vandenberg Enters Hospital for Check

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), has entered Doctors Hospital here for "minor diagnostic procedures," it was learned yesterday.

The Senator entered the hospital Monday, his office disclosed and expects to be released within a few days. The diagnostic work it is understood, is not connected with the major lung operation he underwent last November.

OUT TO GET TV BARGAINS—At 10 p. m. last night, these potential buyers were camped on the sidewalk outside Lubar's radio store, 13th and G st. nw., waiting for the store's doors to open this morning for George Washington Birthday sales. Among the articles advertised was a television set for 99 cents. Policeman Resigns in Gaming Tip

James H. Burgess, suspended Prince Georges County policeman accused of tipping off a suspected gambler that police were watching his establishment, resigned from the force yesterday.

The 31-year-old officer offered his resignation just as the county commissioners were about to render a verdict on the charges after an afternoon of testimony in the Upper Marlboro courthouse.

No Verdict Entered

On a recommendation by T. Hammond Welsh, sr., the commissioners accepted the resignation, effective immediately, and no verdict was entered.

During the hearing Burgess admitted that he had told Sam Morgan, a suspected gambler, that a car sitting near the Romano Inn in Cottage City belonged to Detective Vincent Free of the Upper Marlboro station.

Free and Detective Sergt. Jack Dent had been assigned to watch the activities going on in the second story of the Romano Inn building.

Tells of Phone Call

Burgess said Morgan called him at the Hyattsville Station February 1 and said two suspicious men were sitting in a car near the inn, and since Morgan had heard there had been several holdups recently, he wanted to know who the men were.

The policeman, who is married and lives at 7202 Rhode Island ave., College Park, said he had heard that Pete Genaris, an alleged gambler, had been held up for $17,000 in front of the Romano Inn recently.

Burgess said he then checked the license tags of the "suspicious" car and later "may have told Morgan 'you don't have to worry; he's a police officer.'"

A member of the county force for about six years, Burgess said he'd heard that Morgan was in the clothing business and also was a gambler and bookmaker.

Under cross-examination by Prosecutor Jerrold Powers, Burgess testified that he didn't know the two detectives were assigned to the spot and hadn't seen them before passing the information on to Morgan. If he'd seen them in the car, he said, "I might have realized they were on police business."

Emergency Hospital doctors who pronounced Mrs. Griffin dead said death apparently was due to natural causes. She had no known relatives living in the city.

Arlington Police Ask Pay Raise

The Arlington County Police Beneficiary Association is seeking a "living wage" for the county's policemen.

At a special meeting Monday, it asked (1) that the County Board increase wages approximataly 10 percent, retroactive to July 1, 1949, and (2) that the present minimum of $2400 a year be increased to $3000, "with proportionate increases in the higher brackets."

The present scale, the group said in a resolution, "does not yield a living wage." District policemen, the association pointed out, earn a minimum $3077 salary. The Arlington department is "undermanned and the members of said department are on call 24 hours a day," it said.

What is more, policemen are forbidden to hold other jobs by police regulations, the association noted.

In a second resolution, the association asked the County Board to furnish raincoats, boots and cap covers free to uniformed policemen and to give detectives a clothing allowance equal to the uniform allowance given to uniformed sergeants.

Meter Collector Awarded $21,000 For Crash Wounds

Fred Lowell, 64, of 1507 White pl. se., yesterday was awarded $21,000 damages by a District Court jury for injuries he received in a 1946 traffic accident.

According to his lawyers, Joseph D. Bulman and George E. McNeil, Lowell suffered a partial paralysis of the right side as the result of a spinal injury caused by the accident.

He was hurt at 6th and C sts. nw. while on duty for the District of Columbia collecting from parking meters. He was in a parked automobile which was struck by a taxi operated by the defendant, Eddie Davis, of 4523 Dix st. ne.

The case was tried before Judge Jennings Bailey. Davis contended that the accident was unavoidable.

Alexandria Council Votes Annexation

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

The Alexandria City Council yesterday voted 6 to 1 to annex 7½ square miles of Fairfax County west of its present borders.

The council instructed City Attorney V. Floyd Williams to draft an annexation ordinance, and to name an attorney to work with him on it and at the annexation trial.

Williams told reporters he couldn't have the ordinance ready for passage in less than two weeks. Once it is passed, suit will be filed to bring about annexation.

Action of the city heads came at a special session called to hear the report of the annexation committee, headed by Councilman Albert A. Smoot. The committee's report, based on a study of the land sought for annexation by consulting engineers, said:

"Annexation is both feasible and desirable, and some action must be taken immediately." Smoot later amplified his statement to assert that the move is "financially feasible" as well. He promised a financial statement "early next week."

It was this aspect of the move that caused Councilman Marshall J. Beverley to dissent.

He pointed to the city's unbalanced 1950 budget ($719,000 in the red at the year's outset), its bonded indebtedness of more than nine million dollars, and asserted "our people have been taxed enough."

Alexandria was the second jurisdiction within 24 hours to announce its formal intent to bite into Fairfax County. Falls Church City Council Monday night told its attorney to proceed with a suit for annexation of nearly 11 square miles to the north, east and south of the city.

The territory desired is bounded: On the south by the headwaters of Hunting Creek at the city's lower tip, then west along Cameron Run to the Southern Railroad tracks, and 1½ miles west along the tracks; north from that point slightly more than a mile to Shirley hwy., then north and northwest to the southern boundary of Washington-Virginia Airport, then southeast along the Arlington County line to King st. and Quaker lane, present Alexandria limits.

Occasional Rain, Cloudy Predicted; Truman to Speak In Alexandria

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

Washington's ways of celebrating George Washington's birthday—the traditional ceremonies, speeches, and of course the bargain sales—will be dampened slightly today by discouraging weather.

But not much. Along with the prediction for occasional rain and cloudy skies, the Weather Bureau called for milder temperatures—in the forties by afternoon.

President Truman will make two speeches honoring first President Washington today, both before Masonic groups.

In the morning, at 7:15, Mr. Truman will speak informally at a Statler Hotel breakfast to be given by Frank Land, of Kansas City, founder of the Masonic Order of De Molay.

At 2:30 p. m., the President will make a 15-minute address at Alexandria when a new statue of Washington, gift of the order, will be unveiled at the George Washington Masonic Memorial.

In all respects, the day looks like a Washington celebration as usual:

District stores promised such wonders as radios for 77 cents, and reconditioned washers for $10. For sale were 99-cent typewriters, $6 vacuum cleaners, $5.98 phonograph combinations. Some stores were careful to point out that only one or two of such items were available.

But television sets at less than cost seem to be the major come-on this year. If you get to the stores early enough, you might snap up a lulu for $27—or 99 cents

That was the catch, though: Getting there first. With bargain items limited in quantity, wary shoppers in past years have set up camp stools before daylight.

One store reported an early shopper at 2 p. m.—yesterday at 2, that is. Others said that by 9 p. m. there already were lines forming to the right.

A feature of the District's Washington Birthday celebrations for about a quarter of a century, its origins are almost lost. Businessmen see the day—on which Government workers are off—as a fitting opportunity to clear stocks and make friends in a half-day's activities.

Washington himself might have approved the idea. "Treat with men at fit Times about Business," he said in his Rules of Civility.

The morning's top event in Washington will be the 36th annual "Joint Celebration" in the Interior Department Auditorium at 10:30 a.m. Sponsors are the Daughters of the American Revolution, Children of the American Revolution, Sons of the American Revolution, and Sons of the Revolution.

Maj. Gen. Clovis E. Byers will speak on "Washington and National Defense." The musical program includes selections by the United States Marine Band and the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club.

Luncheon at Carlton

After the "joint celebration," the District Society of the Sons of the American Revolution will hold its annual luncheon at the Carlton Hotel at 12:30 p. m. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, will be guest speaker.

Alexandria will have the only scheduled parades in the Washington area today.

The Holy Name Society of the Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church, Alexandria, together with the Capt. Edward A. Duff Post of Catholic War Veterans, will hold a parade and military mass in honor of Our Lady of Fatima.

The line of march will form at 9:30 a. m. at the Fairlington School. At 10 a. m., the procession will proceed to the church. More than 1000 persons are expected to participate.

At 1 a. m., a VFW parade will form at Montgomery and Washing-

Mrs. Keleher Irked, She Says, By Husband's Beach Antics

Mrs. Anna T. (Dolly) Keleher, 51, testified yesterday she was highly embarrassed to learn in 1946 that her aging husband in Florida was daily applying suntan lotion to the slender body of Mrs. Dorothy S. Blake, 46.

Mrs. Keleher took the witness stand to deny that she ever deserted her spouse, John B. (Dapper Jack) Keleher, 68, a "retired" big-time bookmaker. She said he walked out on her despite her protests that she wanted him to remain with her in their Woodley Park Towers apartment.

Mrs. Keleher wants a limited divorce for cruelty. Keleher wants a limited divorce for cruelty. Keleher, in turn, wants an absolute divorce for desertion.

The case has been going on for more than two weeks before Judge Charles F. McLaughlin in District Court. The trial may conclude Thursday.

Judge McLaughlin told the lawyers that he wants to hear evidence as to worth of a large building Keleher owns at Thomas Circle and which nets him some $8000 annually.

Mrs. Keleher admitted that prior to the splitup in March, 1946, she took from their jointly-held safe deposit boxes $32,000 which Keleher maintains he "earned in my business."

The wife said she spent the money or gambled it in New York, largely according to Keleher's instructions. He asserts that the figure was actually $80,000 and that she never satisfactorily accounted for its disappearance.

She said that she suspected that something was "going on" between Keleher and Mrs. Blake at the time and followed them to Florida. There on the Miami beach, she said she spied on him daily.

"They went to the same spot on the beach," Mrs. Keleher said. "He would apply suntan lotion around her body and smack her on the hip. It was very embarrassing."

She said that Keleher admitted having a "weakness" for women and that they prevailed on him. Keleher had denied any improper association with Mrs. Blake or any other woman.

Montgomery Group Named To Study Upper County Needs

A 10-member rural advisory committee was appointed yesterday by the Montgomery County Council to study the need for planning in the upper county.

The action came after up-county farmer raised strong opposition to a proposed planning commission for the rural areas at a public hearing February 13.

In another action calculated to step up enforcement of local laws, the council named James S. Lanigan as a special assistant to the States Attorney and charged him with prosecution of violations of county ordinances. Lanigan is an assistant county attorney.

Principal ordinances to be enforced by Lanigan include those dealing with zoning, fire regulations and weights and measures standards.

The advisory committee will determine the need, if any, for zoning, subdivision planning and building inspection in the part of the county not included in the jurisdiction of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

It was further asked to determine, if such need exists, whether it should be met through extension of the MNCPPC's control or through regulations of the county council.

Lathrop E. Smith, of Travilah, president of the County Farm Bureau, was appointed chairman of the advisory committee.

Other committee members named at yesterday's meeting are Irving L. McCathren, mayor of Washington Grove; Mrs. Elsie White Haines, of Laytonsville, editor of the Montgomery Sentinel, and the following farmers: Malcolm H. White, Brookeville; Allie Messer, Gaithersburg; Marshall Davis, Germantown; Kenneth Windham, Woodfield; Basil Mobley, Derwood; Wilson Poole, Selman, and William H. Fulks, Laytonsville.

The council also scheduled a hearing for April 6 at 7:30 p. m. in the Rockville Court House on amendments to clarify portions of the zoning ordinances with respect to trailer camps, tourist homes and home occupations.

3 Area Phone Firms Told to Revise Rates

Federal Communications Commission yesterday ordered a downward revision in the annual depreciation rates of the three Chesapeake & Potomac telephone companies in this area.

The order reduces the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. 1948 composite depreciation rate of 4.22 to 3.875 percent; the C. & P. of Virginia rate from 4.565 to 4.273 per cent and the C. & P. of Baltimore City from 4.565 to 4.383 per cent.

The FCC gave the Maryland and Virginia companies a higher depreciation rate because they had fewer dial-operated exchanges and more open wire lines, instead of aerial or underground cables, than the District.

The new rates, retroactive to January 1, 1950, followed studies conducted by the FCC staff in cooperation with officials of the Maryland Public Service Commission, State Corporation Commission of Virginia and the District Public Utilities Commission.

Electric Eye Traps Youth Before Safe

Tip to after-dark thieves: Cross Gilman's Drug Co. off your list. It's guarded by a super sleuth that never sleeps and is invisible.

A 19-year-old youth added to his scientific knowledge at 5 a.m. yesterday when he broke into the drug company, at 627 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

He found the safe easily enough in a rear office, but he didn't know there was an invisible electric eye focused on it.

When the youth stepped in front of the safe, the beam was broken. This set of an ADT burglary protection alarm and within a few minutes Pvts. Russell J. Glover and Paul W. Knight of the First Precinct were at the scene.

They found the youth huddled in a corner in the back of the store. They said he readily admitted he hadn't had time to ransack the store. He identified himself as Melville Z. Ross, 19, of 906 N st. nw.

At the First Precinct, a slip of paper was found in his pocket. Police said Ross told them it contained the combination to the safe in Duffy's Tavern, 3651 Georgia ave. nw. The tavern was broken into Sunday and $2 and two bottles of whisky taken.

Ross, police said, related that he found the combination in a drawer while ransacking the tavern but even so hadn't been able to open the safe.

Ross was charged with housebreaking and will be arraigned in Municipal Court today.

No more lucky were the four youths who broke into the Gem Cleaners, 146 C st. ne., at 1:30 a. m. and removed some clothing.

As they started off in their getaway car, the lights wouldn't work. This attracted a police scout car that gave pursuit.

They got away, but only briefly. Police found them again in a dead-end alley in the 600 block of Pickford pl. ne. The four were pushing the car.

Three of the youths hopped over a fence and escaped. But one 18-year-old surrendered meekly to police. Police withheld charges against him pending arrest of his companions. The clothing was recovered in the car.

Man Killed By Cave-in At Excavation

Ervin K. Brown, 41, of 5019 Fitch pl. ne., was killed yesterday by a cavein at the 14th st. entrance to the Hains Point tourist camp.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered an inquest at 11:30 a. m. Friday to determine if negligence was involved. Dr. MacDonald said he was told that an excavation had not been "shored up."

An autopsy showed that Brown died of a crushed skull and asphyxia. He was the father of six children and an employe of Curtin & Johnson, Inc., 1125 Brentwood rd. ne.

Police said the cavein occurred at about 10:15 a. m. while Brown and three other men were in a six-foot deep water trench where pipes were being laid.

Three of the men ran in one direction as the back wall of the trench began to crumbe. But Brown ran in the opposite direction and was trapped. He was covered by five tons of dirt.

Students Vote Hazing Ban at Maryland U.

University of Maryland students yesterday voted 460 to 207 to adopt a new student government constitution, which prohibits hazing and makes elective all offices of the students' executive committee.

The constitution, written by students during the past two years, will become effective this spring. It replaces one adopted in 1942.

The hazing section of the new laws provides that no student should act under "involuntary duress." This, however, does not affect fraternity or sorority initiations since such activities are considered voluntary.

The section outlaws "ratting"—a tradition which gave sophomores and other upperclassmen the privilege of forcing freshmen to wear caps, recite poetry and to carry out other orders.

UPW and Reporter Differ In Versions of 1946 Session meeting there of CIO's Textile Workers, and it had just adopted a strong anti-Communist foreign policy resolution that supported United States foreign policy. He wanted the UPWA to approve its resolution to offset the Textile Workers' stand.

"I suggest that Mr. Kluttz received this bit of irtelligence also from the unknown, unidentified, about-to-be-shot voice. This is evident from a perusal of the stories filed by reliable reporters. Their stories reveal that there is no truth to Mr. Kluttz's charge.

"One last thought. Is there an unknown, unidentified, about-to-be-shot voice or is it merely a creation of Mr. Kluttz calculated to divert attention from the dilemma that he finds himself in as a result of his personal participation in the nefarious stamp deals of a prominent Government official?"

Other Version

That's UPWA's version. Now here, in part, is the official report on the background of the CIO policy resolution of the CIO committee that recommended expulsion of UPWA:

". . . Other newspapers also reported that the foreign policy resolution was the only resolution adopted on that day of the convention. Moreover, the UPW representatives, although they made several adverse references to Mr. Kluttz, did not deny the accuracy of the story. The committee, therefore, accepts it as true. The resolution speaks for itself. That it was taken out of order at the behest of an agent of The Daily Worker seems to the committee to be entirely consistent with the pro-Communist text of the resolution and with the history of the union leadership that sponsored it.

"In the period following the 1946 convention and continuing up to the present moment, the UPW has never repudiated the basic pro-Soviet position, exhibited at its first convention under its new name. Within the councils of the CIO it has continued to support the program sponsored by the Communist Party . . ."

The CIO report didn't go into the "strike" controversy. But it is a matter of public record that:

(1) The UPWA constitution adopted in 1946 did leave the door open to strikes against the Federal Government; (2) that Congress reacted by voting riders to appropriation bills that would have forced all UPWA members off the Federal payroll, and (3) that the UPWA executive board was compelled to adopt a flat no-strike policy against the Government in order to save the jobs of its Federal members.

A pertinent question—why didn't UPWA adopt a no-strike policy against the Federal Government in the first place if it had no intentions of trying to use the strike weapon?

The CIO committee, incidentally, resorted to nicer language in calling Abram Flaxer, UPWA president, a liar. It said he had declined invitations to either testify or to file statements with it and then accused the committee of denying him the right to testify.

The committee charged him with "complete lack of honesty or good faith," and it said his "self-created inability to testify was made the basis of completely false and vicious attacks on the committee."

The CIO, the committee explained, opposes discrimination and some of the unfair procedures used in the employe loyalty program.

"But the fact that the UPWA, on these two items, has supported CIO policy does not prove that it has not devoted itself to the program of the Communist Party. For the Communist Party has always exploited the Negro issue as an instrument of 'class warfare' and, for obvious reasons, has opposed not only the unfair elements in the loyalty program but the program itself."

Mayflower Hails Hilton At Lavish Reception to Washington's Top Crust

Joining hands to cut the Mayflower Hotel's twenty-fifth anniversary cake last night are (from left) Conrad N. Hilton, president of the Hilton Hotels; Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark and C. J. Mack, general manager of the Mayflower

With four bars in operation, and champagne flowing like—well, like champagne—Washington's great and near great went to the Mayflower Hotel last night to celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary.

It was a reception given by C. J. Mack, the hotel manager, in honor of Conrad Hilton, the Mayflower's owner. And it cost the Mayflower $10 a head for the 900 who attended.

The conversation piece at this party was the 56-foot table set up in the ballroom and loaded with suckling pigs and turkeys, frogs legs, crown roasts, seafood Newburg, pates, glaces, ice cream and cakes. A sunken garden coursed its way down the center of the table, tubs of white azaleas, silver leaves and feathery ferns taking on a blush pink tone from the indirect lights. Small tables ringed the room; Sidney and his orchestra played and every guest stopped to view the chef d'oeuvre—a page from "The Man Who Bought the Waldorf," a Hilton biography, done in sugar on a gold standard.

The Mayflower even had the foresight to provide specially prepared dishes from South America, Mexico, Turkey and other places for the many diplomats who attended.

To serve all these delicacies, the hotel brought out its gold table service—very much like the service Dolly Madison used when she was hostess at the White House.

When the hotel was opened in February, 1925, there also was a party. It was a huge banquet then, and it came complete to 800 guests, followed by a dance in the new main ballroom.

Hilton was obviously pleased with the doings in his honor. He bought the Mayflower three years ago.

I saw Mrs. Walter George and Mrs. Max Gardner having their supper together; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de la Colina going around the table just looking and the Finnish Minister, Dr. K. T. Jutila, who told me that when he lived for a time at the Statler he studied the hotel business from the kitchen to the accounting room.

Politicos, Diplomats Both Enjoy Party

MME. DENDRAMIS, wife of the Greek Minister, was there, as were the Iceland Minister and Mme. Thors; the Thai Minister and Princess Waithayakon, sitting together at a table; Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, and the Ecuador Ambassador, Augusto Dillon, who had been first to the Pan American Union ceremony.

Representative Joe Martin and Herbert Brownell, former chairman of the Republican National Committee, came together. Senator and Mrs. Pat McCarran were there, and Mrs. Stanley Reed and Mrs. George Malone who have apartments at the Mayflower.

Saw Presidential Secretary Charles Ross, Gen. and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley and the Burks Summers in dinner clothes headed for another party. I met Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster in the lobby stopping for a look-see before going to a dinner party.

Mrs. Leslie Biffle in a fascinating tulle hat sparkling with rhinestones waited for her husband to join her; M. and Mme. Camille Chautemps were there, and so were Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Dr. and Mrs. Charles McEnerney and Mrs. Emil Hurja. Col. Curt Schiffeler, the Raleigh Hotel's manager, said "I'm enjoying this with a vengeance."

Hotel Celebrates 25th Anniversary

AFTER champagne toasts to Nicaragua, and after sampling the hot and cold buffet, many of the diplomats went on to the Mayflower Hotel's twenty-fifth anniversary reception given by Corneal J. Mack, the hostelry's manager, in honor of Conrad Hilton, the owner.

One-a-Penny, Two-a-Penny Hot Cross Buns Are a Must for Lent; Anne Gives Her Favorite Recipe

DEAR ANNE:
Can you give me a really good recipe for Lenten hot cross buns?
V. L. C.

Crumb topping adds a delectable touch to the following version of the traditional hot cross bun:

EASY HOT CROSS SQUARES

1 package yeast compressed or dry
¼ cup lukewarm water
1 cup milk
¼ cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
½ cup shortening
3¼ cups sifted enriched flour (about)
½ teaspoon cinnamon.
¼ teaspoon allspice
2 eggs
1 cup currants
Confectioners' sugar icing.

Soften yeast in lukewarm water. Scald milk. Add sugar, salt, and shortening and cool to lukewarm. Add 2 cups flour and spices and beat well. Add softened yeast and eggs and mix thoroughly. Add enough more flour to make a stiff batter. Beat thoroughly until smooth.

Cover and let rise in warm place until light and bubble (about 1 hour). Add currants and stir down. Spread evenly into two greased 8 by 8-inch pans. Sprinkle with crumb topping. Make squares by pressing lines into batter with floured finger tips. Let rise until light (about 30 minutes). Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) about 30 minutes. Bake in 375-degree oven for about 30 minutes. Make cross on each square with confectioner's sugar icing. This recipe makes 1½ dozen 2½-inch squares, or 2½ dozen 2-inch squares.

Crumb topping:
½ cup bread crumbs
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup butter or margarine.

Combine flour, bread crumbs, sugar and cinnamon. Cut or rub in butter or margarine until mixture is crumbly. Sprinkle over beaten batter. Makes enough for two pans of squares.

DEAR ANNE:
In our house, there are cracks between the joints in the woodwork around the window. They catch dirt, are unsightly and let in air besides. How could we fill them ourselves? Or should we have a carpenter repair them? B. L.

If the open joints aren't too wide, you can fill them quite nicely with putty tinted with color-in-oil to match the woodwork. Should the gap be too great for this moulding and trim will have to be taken off and refitted. Whether you have to call in a carpenter for this or not depends on how skilled an amateur you have in your family circle.

DEAR ANNE:
I am anxious to melt down candle ends into new candles. Have you any suggestions as to the type of container I can use for a mold?
Mrs. Paul R. Gowen,
Viers Mill Village,
Silver Spring, Md.

Cardboard containers are grand for this purpose. Once the wax is hard, you can peel off the cardboard easily. A friend of mine made a very attractive big candle by pouring melted candle stubs of various colors into a square milk carton. She let each batch of wax harden before pouring in the next. Result: A horizontal-stripe effect.

In making such candles, use a piece of string for a wick in the middle. Tie a weight to the end of it to keep it from rising from the bottom while wax is still in a fluid state.

Smaller candles can be made with paper cups, tubes, or cream container. Or, if you wish, pour the melted wax into an empty cleansing cream jar. The resulting candle can be burned right in the jar.

DEAR ANNE:
I have two lovely Chinese hand-made silk chiffon gown and negligee sets which have never been worn. Is there any way they can be packed in order to keep them well a number of years? Can they be washed or cleaned? They are very delicate. B. R.

Packing with plenty of tissue paper (so sharp folds and wrinkles won't weaken the fabric) is a prime step in storing the sets safely away. If they're white, it's a good idea to use dark blue tissue to prevent yellowing. Put them in roomy suit boxes and store in dry place.

As to the cleaning, it would be safest to have them dry-cleaned by a firm specializing in delicate fabrics. It's possible, though, that if the garments are simply made (the gowns, particularly) you could wash them safely in gentle lukewarm suds.

Fairfax Courthouse Observing Washington's Birthday—at Last!

FOR NEARLY a century and a half, everywhere throughout the land, February 22 has been observed as a national holiday in commemoration of the birth of the Father of our Country.

ELLEN PARRY

Everywhere, that is, except in the courthouse of Fairfax, the county where Washington lived, worked, grew to manhood — and where his remains rest in glory.

Today, for the first time on February 22 in remembered history, the ancient, ivy-covered seat of the county government is closed.

The big break came to county workers this year, courtesy of the board of supervisors, to underscore yet another anniversary: the 150th of the courthouse itself

The courthouse anniversary actually takes place during the summer. But there's a direct tie between the building and the hero whose birthday is remembered today, for Washington himself is said to have helped in selection of the site, and to have "stepped off" the location just prior to his death. Still another Washington link with the courthouse is the "last will and testament" of the first President preserved in the office of the circuit clerk, along with that of the First Lady.

Fairfax remembers that Washington served as vestryman in the original Falls Church, from which the present town takes its name; that he belonged to the Alexandria Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, and that, after leaving the Presidency, he assumed the humbler mantle of a justice of the peace, in Fairfax County.

Back in 1742—Washington was then only 10 years old—frontiersmen built the first courthouse on what is known as Freedom Hill, a stone's throw from Tysons Corner along Chain Bridge rd. Ten years later, according to a marker on the site, this building "was abandoned because of Indian hostilities" and the county seat removed to the security of Alexandria.

There it remained for nearly half a century before being moved again to Fairfax. During the Civil War, the present courthouse was stripped of its furnishings to serve as a stable for Union cavalry. During Reconstruction, pews from an abandoned church were utilized to replace the missing spectators' benches. They are still in use today.

On the courthouse lawn, passersby see a reminder of the past in the granite marker bearing this inscription:

"This stone marks the scene of the opening of the conflict, 1861-65, when John O. Marr, captain of the Warrentown Rifles, who was the first soldier killed in action, fell 800 feet s.w. of this spot, June 1, 1861."

MRS. EDWARD CAMPION (ELIZABETH) ACHESON has a new Hungarian cook who can't speak a word of English. What's worse, she says she can't learn, and since she's been in the United States for sometime without acquiring the language, Elizabeth is inclined to believe her.

TED ACHESON

Elizabeth has decided, therefore, there is nothing for her to do but learn Hungarian, for cooks aren't easily come by out in the country at Rolling Farm, the Achesons' place near Great Falls. Elizabeth thinks Ted, her husband, is too thin, so she feels she must have a good cook to fatten him up a bit.

Speaking of Ted being thin reminds us of a story about Ted and his brother, Secretary of State Dean Acheson. When the Acheson boys were even thinner than they are now, they made a crossing to Europe.

One day during the trip, Ted was in their stateroom by himself. It was hot and stuffy, so he opened the porthole, forgetting that, in order to keep the trip as inexpensive as possible, they had settled for a stateroom way down on F deck.

Instead of air, water poured in and flooded the room before the porthole could be closed again, forcing the occupants to vacate in a hurry. The following morning, one of the passengers asked the Captain where the Acheson boys had slept the night before.

"We put them in the music room," the captain said. "But," asked the passenger, "where could they have slept in the music room?"

"Oh," said the Captain, "they slept on the piano—Ted on the white keys, Dean on the black."

THEN there's another Acheson story about servant trouble which friends of the couple love to tell. Seems Ted and Elizabeth had a handyman named Onnie, who borrowed $100 with the understanding that the advance would be taken out of his pay for several weeks following.

However, shortly after contracting his debt, Onnie disappeared without warning, and, somewhat to the Achesons' surprise, reappeared a few days later working in the yard of their neighbor, Malcolm Ross.

"Look, here, Onnie," Ted exclaimed with padonable irritation. "You're supposed to be working for us. What in the dickens are you doing in my neighbor's yard?"

"Can't afford to work for you for credit, when I can get cash from Mr. Ross," the unabashed Onnie replied.

See Yourself Slim And You've Won Half the Battle

By Ida Jean Kain

STRETCHING the imagination is fascinating exercise. So today, exercise your imagination to picture yourself at beautiful normal weight and vitally alive.

The first step in our psychological figure-fixing course is desire. You must sincerely want to achieve healthy normal weight and a good figure. This desire must be backed up by a deeply ingrained belief that this time you can accomplish what you set out to do. BELIEVING will put the requisite starch in your will power . . . and you will act to change your habits.

Then you're ready for the next step—visualizing. And that's where imagination comes in strong. Never belittle the power of imagination, but don't confuse it with fancy. You can't weigh less by fancying you do—that's merely pretending. But imagination gives you the power to see through the way things are to the way they can be . . . and once you focus this image vividly on your inner thought track, it starts to materialize; it really does, for the subconscious mind holds the image as the model on which to do the daily building. It won't materialize a week from next Tuesday, but you're on the way.

Don't Try to Be Too Thin

GET THE right picture—don't aim to be ultra-thin. Your healthiest and most flattering weight depends on your bony structure. If your frame is large, don't try for streamlines. Not only would you lose all your bounce and verve, but you'd lose your looks! So picture yourself vitally alive at beautiful normal weight.

To picture accurately, it is wise to know your ideal weight, for that's your goal. Go by the chart at the right—height computed without shoes; weight, without clothes. If there is any doubt about the size of your frame, settle for medium. The large frame, but few women have a frame which warrants the top weight given in the last column of figures.

What about birthdays? Don't count them. Your normal weight from 25 to 30 is your healthiest and youngest weight from then on to the end of the road.

Action for today: Weigh in, mark it down with the date . . . and on with the will-power-building menus. Don't dwell on the total amount of excess to be lost . . . just think, "This week I can slim down two pounds."

'White Elephants' Carried Out in Baskets

They carried "white elephants" out of the back door of Hitt Mansion yesterday by the basketfulls.

The contents, ranging from high style winter bonnets to pieces of antique glass and Chinese objects d'art, were the donations of more than 500 guests attending the Thrift Shop's annual benefit.

Mrs. Truman headed the list of distinguished guests at the benefit, proceeds from which will be divided among the six partner charity organizations of the shop. Feature attraction of the afternoon was a showing of fashions designed by Omar Kiam of the house of Ben Reig, presented by Julius Garfinckel & Co.

Following the fashion show, which took place in the second-floor drawing rooms of the historic old mansion, just off Dupont Circle, tea was served in the paneled library on the first floor.

The First Lady, accompanied by Mrs. Fred Vinson and other honored visitors, rode a small elevator to the third floor, where they had tea as guests of Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, president of the Thrift Shop board.

William Hitt, who loaned the house for the occasion, was also a guest. The residence was built in 1910 by his mother, the late Mrs. Robert R. Hitt, whose husband was a representative from Illinois and also served as Assistant Secretary of State under Secretary James G. Blaine.

Nicaraguan Memorial Is Unveiled

By Marie MacNair

NICARAGUA'S national hero, Miguel Larreynaga, took his place in the Gallery of Heroes at the Pan American Union yesterday.

At a ceremony in which the Nicaraguan Ambassador and Senora de Sevilla Sacasa participated, the marble bust of the man who helped write the Declaration of Independence for the Central American Federation of States more than 100 years ago joined the 20 statesmen of the Amercan republics.

Flags of the 21 Americas, aligned on the broad terrace outside, snapped in the winter wind. Inside in the Hall of Flags the Marine Band string ensemble in their scarlet tunics played during the reception which followed the ceremony.

Dr. Sevilla-Sacasa made the presentation speech before a gathering of Latin American diplomats and personal friends. Then he turned and raised the blue and white flag of his country to unveil the bust. The acceptance speech for the Pan American Union was delivered by Dr. Aberto Llerto, Secretary General of the Organization of American States, and Dr. Luis Quintanilla, chairman of the Council of OAS, sat as a memberof the distinguished rio on the stage.

IN THE front row was Senora Sevilla-Sacasa, a fur jacket thrown over her black lace gown, a lace halo on her dark hair piled high atop her head.

The Peruvian Ambassador, Fernando Berckemeyer and the Chilen Ambassador, Felix Nieto del rio, came without their wives. The Paraguay Ambassador and Senora de Boettner and the Brazilian Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco, were there. Gen. Harry Vaughan, strung with medals, took a seat next to Judge and Mrs. George Neilson.

Senora de Lequerica's jet-trimmed red hat stood out among rows of somber blacks and browns; Senora de la Colina's soft silver blue mink cape was topped by a tiny black hat. Others present were the Dominican Ambassador and Senora de Thomen; the Bolivian Ambassador and Senora Martinez Vargas; Paul Daniels, United States Ambassador to the OAS; Ray Muir, Assistant Chief of Protocol of the State Department; Julio Huertematte; Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward; Mr. and Mrs. Willard Barber; Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, in a satin suit which matched her titian hair; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, and Mrs. Frances Jacobs of Grosse Pointe.

Mrs. Dewey Engaged

MRS. JOSEPH I. WELLER announces the engagement of her daughter, Mrs. A. Peter Dewey, to John Pierrepont, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford Stuyvesant Pierrepont of Far Hills, N. J.

The bride-elect is the widow of Lieut. Colonel A. Peter Dewey, son of former Representative and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, who was killed in Indo-China in 1945 while serving with the OSS. She has a young daughter, Nancy. Mrs. Dewey is the granddaughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Paul Brandon Barringer of the University of Virginia. She was graduated from the Madeira School.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Husband Promises Wife He Will Avoid Girl Who Crosses His Path for Conversation, But He Breaks Pledge and Wife Is Distressed

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband is 27, I am 22, we have been married nearly four years and have two sweet children—the youngest an infant. We are a happy little family and Henry is a student majoring in civics. Our problem is that Henry met a girl about his own age some time ago, at a conference of some kind—and they've been seeing each other since.

Henry likes to talk to her, and she, on being invited to join meetings of a religious group he attends, has been doing so. The younger members of the group usually go to a nearby drugstore for refreshments afterwards, where they often talk for hours. My husband is the only married person who goes along; and last week only he and this girl Sylvia stayed for coffee. They went to the drugstore at 9 p. m. and talked until around 11:30.

He says they talked of politics, religion, economics, the usual topics, also about the girl and her work as a student; and while I don't distrust him, it did hurt my feelings that he would talk with another girl for so long. I consider it improper for a married man to visit with a single girl alone, at a drugstore or any place like that. If he chances to meet her, it is quite all right to speak to her, but taking her out deliberately, even for just a cup of coffee, does distress me.

Is Wife Unfair to Ask Promise?

HENRY SAYS my views are Victorian and that I am trying to enslave him, but he promised to avoid her, because he loves me and is willing to do as I wish. However, after last night's meeting they went to the drugstore again and stayed for about half an hour. Henry told me about it because I asked, and because he is incapable of lying. He said it would have been rather unfriendly not to ask her; but again I was upset and he was very sorry, and promised definitely to avoid her. Am I unfair in letting him promise me that?

He says he just likes to talk to her as he would a man, but it hurts me just the same. He says I am a good mate, that he loves me and is proud of me, but that I'm not as interested in his mental pursuits as I should be, therefore he seeks other company. Most of his friends are men and he spends hours talking to them. He says he seldom meets a woman who talks well, and he finds Sylvia a quite stimulating conversationalist. I met her the other day, but we didn't talk long and I am undecided about her character.

I am interested a little in my husband's favorite topics, but being a busy housewife I can't read as much as I'd like. I attend the meetings occasionally, but we can't always find or afford a baby sitter, so then I stay home and attend my church services in the mornings. But we go together whenever possible. Please give me perspective on our situation. C. S.

Man Is Pursued, With His Consent

DEAR C. S.: The problem amounts to this—Sylvia has no man of her own, therefore she is stalking yours, partly because she is smitten with him and partly because he seems susceptible to her hungry blandishments.

He likes the feeling of being the apple of her eye, and she likes being in his company (for reasons aforesaid). And I daresay she is trying to lead him to think that you haven't the capacity to appreciate him, or at any rate that you haven't been really awake to the treasure he is, or approximately grateful for the privilege of sharing his life. And the accent on learned talk is applesauce; it is hypocritical whitewash of a form of dating, expediently linked to the church meetings.

What she's got for Henry that you haven't got—or that you are neglecting to provide—is time to be on the loose, on the town, at leisure with him, seemingly with no other desire than to help him admire himself from fresh new viewpoints.

Wife Should Block the Girl's Play

WHAT HENRY overlooks, of course, is that you've given him your whole life, which nowadays is pretty much taken up with running his home, taking care of him, tending his babies, etc.; and I suggest to him that if he talked less in his spare time and helped you more with household chores, you'd have more opportunity, energy and stimulus to be a starry-eyed pal to him, when he wants to break out of domestic routine.

For advice to you—it seems futile to bank on promises, although it's fair enough to ask them in the circumstances. If Henry hasn't the gumption to sidestep a girl who's after him, when he is substantially in love with his wife, then obviously he needs help in going straight. And in my opinion the emergency calls for you to draft his cooperation in making more time for yourself, in which to be his playmate, his companion at meetings, the lady who hangs on his words, etc.,—all of which will help take his mind off Sylvia, and let her see that the game's up. M. H.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

MALU GATICA, auburn-haired singer at the Old New Orleans, is par excellence in night club style. Just an average person off stage, she commands the attention of everyone when she gets under the spotlights.

MALU GATICA
. . . At the Old New Orleans

This is largely due to her mellow voice and the art and modulation with which she uses it. Also, she sings with her heart; the audience gets a different impression of the songs they've heard many a time before. Another reason for her success is the underplayed but very expressive use of the hands and body. Miss Gatica really puts her songs across.

Daryl Harpa is doing some unusual show work with his rhumba band at the Old New Orleans Latin Quarter. "The Birth of the Rhumba" is a fascinating tale of jungle noises (illustrated with exotic instruments) and their progression to the rhumba we know. Another number is a dance sequence of a Latin American baseball game—to rhumba time. Papito and Marna Paige, singer and dancer with the band, act this one out.

DINERS who appreciate the small specialty type restaurant are breathing a sigh of relief that the 1600 and 1700 blocks of Connecticut ave. have been opened to traffic. The street is repaved and clear for driving and parking on both sides; there is parking also on 20th st. Dupont Circle is open to traffic all the way round — if in a slightly muddy state. Impassable stretches have narrowed to the two blocks just above the circle.

That shouldn't bother gourmets, though. Alfred's, Caligure's and Maxime's are all in the cleared 1700 block; the Parrot Restaurant is at R, between 1600 and 1700. The Ivy Terrace is at the junction of Connecticut and 20th.

For distinctive atmosphere, Alfred's is recommended. Its narrow, muraled main dining room attracts many diplomats and travelers who comment that it brings back memories of European eating places. For those whose taste runs to heavy, spicy victuals, authentic Italian cooking can be had at Caligure's Tony and Frank Caligure boast a menu of dishes for Italians—no American adaptations.

'Mr. Jones, Meet the Master'

Influence of Christ's Disciples on History Termed Immense

FOREWORD

There are no other sermons like Peter Marshall's. For there was no other man like Peter Marshall.

The beloved Chaplain of the United States Senate, Peter Marshall passed away recently at the age of 46. He had attained a national reputation at an age when most clergymen are still unknown.

The Washington Post during the early Lenten season is publishing the richest passages from Peter Marshall's most vigorous sermons. They were preached in Washington's historic New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. They were addressed to the man he called "Mr. Jones," to the multitude of clerks and taxi drivers, butchers and housewives, motormen and the lonely girl in the hospital ward.

Taken from the book, "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," the sermons preserve the emphasis of his words, by a special typographical style. The manuscripts are presented exactly as Peter Marshall prepared them.

By Dr. Peter Marshall

DISCIPLES IN CLAY

I wonder how you would like to be on an investigating committee? Apparently there are some people in Washington who enjoy that sort of thing.

Suppose you had been on such a committee nineteen hundred years ago, to inquire into the qualifications of those who sought to become disciples of Jesus. How would you have voted on them?

Let us imagine we were there on an examining board.

Here comes the first candidate.
He has just come up from the beach.
As you can judge from his appearance, he has just entered middle age.
But he is already bald, and the fringes of hair that remain are already gray.
His hands are rough and calloused.
His fingers are strong.
He smells of fish!
He is an uncouth person—not at all refined, or cultured, or educated.
Blustering
clumsy
impulsive.
Why, he is forty if he is a day.
Does not the ministry demand young men?
His ideas will be very hard to change.
He will be stubborn, set in his ways.
He is a rough man, and he has lived a rough life.
When provoked, he is liable to burst into profanity, and his vocabulary is lurid.
Can you imagine this big fisherman as a disciple of Jesus?
He would not be your choice would he?
No, we'd better send Simon back to his nets.

The next candidates are brothers; they come in together.
They, too, like Simon Peter, are fishermen.
But you are going to hold that against them, are you?
Let no social snobbishness sway your judgment.
Remember the Lord Himself was a carpenter.
They have strong hands and nimble fingers.
They make quite a team, these brothers.
They operate a boat in partnership, and they are very successful.
They are not modest men.
They are boastful, and through cupped hands they like to shout taunts to the other fishermen hauling on their nets.
They have little patience with people who cross them, and they would be inclined to call down fire from heaven to burn them up.
Get rid of objectors!
That's their motto.
They would want to be in the chief places.
They think they belong in front.
If we took time to hear all the testimony from people who know them, our verdict would be unanimous that James and John would simply not do.

So, let us pass on to the next candidate.
There is a wild gleam in his eyes—and no wonder.
He is a leader of the Underground.
He seems to be of the fanatical type, impatient and nervous.
See—he cannot keep his hands still—his fingers clench and unclench.
His eyes dance at the thought of the Messiah, at the head of a liberating army.
driving the hated Roman into the sea.
But this young man might be too dangerous.
He is highly inflammable material.
He is a great risk—a very great risk.
We could not take a chance on Judas.
We dare not.

Well, what about this fellow?
He, too, is a fisherman.
Let's not hold that against him.
This man might have it in him to be a disciple.
He is not impulsive by any means.
He will not be swept off his feet.
He is very cautious, slow to convince.
He must have been born in some little Palestinean "Missouri."
You have to show him.
He demands proof for everything.
He'll take nothing on faith.
He will be like the rusty little tramp steamer in the convoy.
He'll slow down the others to his own wheezy seven or eight knots.
In fact, he has only two speeds, dead slow and stop.
"This is not the time" will be his theme song.
"Let's wait and see," will be his advice.
How could Thomas possibly fit into that picture?
Now, if we were Jews living at the time the disciples were originally chosen, we would boo or hiss as this next candidate enters, for he is a Quisling.
He has sold out to the army of occupation and is collecting taxes for the Roman government.
Tax collectors are seldom the most popular men in any community, and this fellow is a racketeer to boot.
He has devised his own racket and it is making him many enemies and making him rich as well.
He has a mind like an adding machine.
He has been counting money all his life.
Can you imagine a Quisling as a friend of Jesus,
a statistician walking with the Carpenter from Nazareth,
a man who had made a god of money?
No, Levi, or Matthew if you like, must be rejected.

What about this fellow Andrew?
Does anyone know about him?
I have heard it said that he has no personality—whatever that means.
I know that he is Peter's brother, but I know of no good reason why he should be chosen.
There are others still waiting—Bartholemew,
Thaddeus,
Philip and another James and a man called Simon from Canaan.
They are all interested in becoming disciples, but I know of no particular reason why they should.
We would not vote for any of them.
Yet these are the very men whom Jesus chose to be His disciples.
I feel sure you would not argue with me if I suggested that these men had more influence on the course of human history than any other dozen men who ever lived.
Had you and I been members of any investigating committee we would have rejected everyone of them.
Yet Jesus chose them.
Why?
Mark tells us in his Gospel that Jesus chose them "in order that they might be with Him" and that He might send them forth "to preach and to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils."
Well, they were with Him for three years, in intimacy of fellowship.
They walked with Him, they lived with Him.
They heard His incomparable parables.
They listened to every sermon He ever preached.
They saw with their own eyes, each one of His wonderful miracles.
They saw the blind receive their sight, the lame throw away their crutches.
They saw withered limbs become straight and strong.
They even saw the dead raised to newness of life.
Yet these things did not change these men.
For during the last week of Jesus' earthly ministry, they were quarreling among themselves.
James and John wanted the chief places in the cabinet of the Kingdom.
They were jealous of each other.
They were not very brave.
When Jesus was arrested they all ran away.
After He died, they scattered and went underground.
They met behind closed doors.
No, they were not very brave.
They did not have much faith.
Thomas refused to believe that the Master had risen from the dead until he had proof.
Of course these three years did something to them and in them.
The fuel had been laid on the fire, but it was not lit.
The seed had been sown, but it had not germinated.
What did change them?
Not the crucifixion
not the resurrection
but the coming of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost.
Not until these men were filled with the Holy Ghost were they changed.
Not until The Spirit had come upon them in power were they changed, so that cowardice gave place to courage, unbelief became a flaming faith and conviction that nothing on earth could shake jealousy was swallowed up in brotherly love self-interest was killed and became a ministry to others fear was banished, and they were afraid of no man . . . no threat, no danger.
We have the same opportunity to be changed, because the same Holy Spirit is available to us today.
He has been sent into the world to lead us into all truth, to convict us of sin,
to be our Helper, our Guide.
God hasn't given up on you.
He can still do great things for you, in you, and through you.
God is ready and waiting and able.
Do not despair.
If you want to be different, you may.
You, too, can be changed for the better. Therein lies our hope—and the hope of the world.
We are disciples in clay.
And there is still the skill of the Potter.

Our Washington

George Washington was truly great . . . And we give thanks today . . . That he began the country that . . . Is now the U. S. A. . . . He led the way to Valley Forge . . . And all throughout the war . . . That we might live in liberty . . . And peace for evermore . . . And ever since he raised the flag . . . To guide his valiant force . . . Our nation has endeavored to . . . Pursue his prudent course . . . He was a mighty statesman, and . . . An able president . . . The symbol of democracy . . . And equal government . . . We give our praise to Washington . . . And thanks almighty God . . . That one so great belonged to us . . . And walked upon this sod.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

They're Chopping Down Prices in Honor of G. Washington

Yes, the father of our country
Gave the world a famous date.
But now here's how District Liners
Mark the day, and celebrate:

With the break of dawn this morning
All the houses will disgorge
Hordes of sale day shoppers, shouting:
"Happy bargain birthday, George!"

PERSONAL NOTES

Dr. Francis N. McDonald, 2515 Bladensburg rd. ne.: You've caught us, fair and square. In the bulldog edition we mixed up the definitions for one day with the crossword puzzle for another. But all subsequent editions carried the proper combination.

Mrs. Edith Spitzberg, 1883 Ingleside ter. nw.: Traffic experts estimate that a pedestrian walks more than 4 feet per second at an average pace. Therefore the 30 seconds of green at Park rd. is deemed more than sufficient for crossing 16th st.

What to do about elderly pedestrians, and the dangers arising from right- and left-turn traffic, is something else again.

GOOBERDEGOOK

Jess Veihmeyer of 307 34th pl. ne. gets off a few more observations on the subject of peanuts at baseball games. He writes:

"Maybe the Nats could switch their customers to coconuts. The shells would be easier to clean up.

"Better yet, perhaps they could popularize peanut butter. Most baseball fans would soon become accustomed to peanut butter instead of peanuts, and there would be a lot less debris to clean up.

"For the old timers, who might find it hard to break a lifetime habit, a side order of shells could be provided. Fans could mash a few shells as they eat their peanut butter, and everybody would be happy."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two small, good-natured female pups, 2 months old." (Olympic 9000.)

"Collie pup needs yard." (Decatur 7808.)

"Pedigreed, housebroken German Shepherd, 1 year old, wants home with fenced yard." (Georgia 5817.)

MISCELLANY

The questions that turn up in my mail bag! A midshipman at Annapolis wants to know whether any local hospitals buy blood. He's got to raise some quick cash . . . My doctor laughed when I put the question to him. "Tell your correspondent there are easier ways to make money," he said. "Most blood donations these days are given voluntarily" . . . Mrs. C. B. Haslam of 636 Butler dr., way down in Midway Park, N. C., chimes in that she's a Gene (WTOP) Klavan fan, too—but the guy is ruining her sleep with his late hours . . . Mrs. Anne Platt of the Home for Incurables (3720 Upton st. nw.) would like to have some 4-ply worsted yarn in all colors. She wants to crochet an afghan . . . Mrs. Charles Simons of 1321 Quincy st. nw. sends me a check for $5 for the Heart Fund and explains that the money was raised at a puppet show staged by Shelley Wallerstein and Dick Kilby, both aged 11. Seventeen neighborhood children laid their dough on the line at the boxoffice to make the show a financial success, but for some reason Dick Coe failed to review it . . . Emma W. Muncaster of Derwood, Md., tells me that her brother gave her a lot of kidding when she was chosen for jury duty, but Emma didn't mind because she got a couple of good chuckles out of the experience. One fellow who was up for selling liquor without a license (that's a fancy name for bootlegging) was asked by the judge why he had engaged in such a business. The defendant pondered a moment and then assured the jurist: "Well, I wasn't doing it for a hobby, your honor" . . . Which reminds me—the judge business isn't what it used to be. I was a judge in a beauty contest staged by the D. C. Cancer Aid Group recently, and didn't get a single bribe offer all night long.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

Almost 100,000 American families buy television sets each week; but the "old fashioned" radio industry is still making and selling sets at almost twice that pace.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Money may not buy happiness, but it certainly buys a lot of things that help a guy forget he's unhappy.

Acheson Has Precedents in Hiss Defense

By Drew Pearson

Secretary Acheson's refusal to "turn his back" on Alger Hiss is now criticized not only by GOP Senators, but also by Dictator Franco's official radio.

ACHESON

The Madrid broadcast is significant. Because, like Moscow, the "Voice of the Falange" radio station operates for and by the Spanish government, what it says represents the official view of the dictator.

It may also be significant that the Spanish attack on Acheson and the State Department came shortly after Acheson had quit "turning his back on Franco" and had indicated that he was willing to extend him full recognition.

Despite this, the voice of the Falange blared forth on February 13:

"Well-known Communists have been located in the U. S. State Department. This has been stated by a Republican Senator (McCarthy of Wisconsin) who added that these men held quite important positions in this ministry. It is not merely a question of Hiss, who has been convicted of perjury and to whom Acheson has promised his continued friendship. We are not surprised by this announcement.

Acheson's defense of Hiss has a lot of interesting precedents in United States history. They include: Andrew Jackson's defense of Aaron Burr; Charles Evans Hughes' defense of Senator Newberry; Taft's early defense of Richard Ballinger—later silenced; and Harry Truman's defense of Boss Tom Pendergast.

Note—It may have been the Pendergast incident that led Truman to support Acheson when he informally offered to resign over the Hiss incident three weeks ago. Though the State Department issued a carefully worded denial, here is exactly what happened. Acheson dropped in at the White House late in the afternoon shortly after the Hiss statement, and Truman began to tell him, half-jokingly, what a barrage of criticism he had been getting. Acheson remarked that he would be glad to get out if he was causing any embarrassment, to which the President told his Secretary of State to stand pat and not to pay any attention to these "yapping S.O.B's."

Charles Evans Hughes—Cool, calm and cautious Secretary of State Hughes did pretty much what Acheson did when Michigan's Senator Truman H. Newberry was convicted of violating the Corrupt Practices Act.

Newberry had been elected to the Senate in a contest with the late Henry Ford in which Newberry spent a great deal of money and later was convicted. Hughes, then in private practice, defended him, and the case was appealed to the Supreme Court, which set aside the conviction. By this time Hughes had become Secretary of State, but nevertheless wrote a letter stating: "The plain fact was that Senator Newberry was wrongly and most unjustly convicted and his conviction was set aside."

The Hughes letter brought just as loud protests from the Democrats as the Acheson defense of Hiss has from Republicans.

Andrew Jackson—When Aaron Burr was being tried for treason in Richmond, Andrew Jackson was one of the few to support him under extremely unpopular circumstances. Albert J. Beveridge describes the Richmond incident as follows:

"A tall, lank, uncouth-looking personage with long locks of hair hanging over his face . . . mounted the steps of a corner grocery and harangued the glowering assemblage that gathered in front of him. His daring and unmistakable air of danger to anyone who disputed him prevented violent interruption certain to have been visited upon one less bold. He praised Burr as a brave man and a patriot who would have led Americans against the hated Spanish.

William Howard Taft—On September 13, 1909, President Taft wrote a letter to Secretary of the Interior Richard Ballinger, completely absolving him in the Alaskan land scandals. In 1911, however, Ballinger resigned following an investigation by Louis Brandeis, which disclosed that the letter of 1909 actually was written by Ballinger's attorney, Oscar Lawler.
